MORAN IS A CROOK
Mr. Moran is using the office of District Attorney as if it were his private property, degrading it to a degree that has never occurred in the history of this county.
The record which he is making at Pemberton square every day reveals a closer intimacy with corrupt politicians than has characterized the administration of any office within this part of the country within our recollection.—From the Republic of Nov. 2
The Mayor is making no apology for his action in the county fights. If he had shaped his course as a practical politician, regardless of his obligations, he would have supported Mr. Moran for District Attorney and thus made his own way easy in the Mayor's chair.—From the Republic of November 6.

WOMEN AND CHILDREN SAVED BY POLICE HEROES IN FIERCE TENEMENT FIRE

Whole Family Carried Through Flame and Smoke to Safety by Brave Officers—Citizens Aided in Work of Rescue.

Women and children, half suffocated and in danger of being caught by the flames, groped blindly about the rooms on the third and fourth floors of the apartment house, No. 131 Staniford street, West End, to-day, until police officers and citizens rescued them.

Two of the women were in such serious condition that they had to be attended by physicians. Several children were temporarily overcome by smoke. Only the hardest kind of work on the part of the rescuers prevented death or serious injury to more than one.

Two families, who lived on the upper floor of the house, made their escape by way of the roof.

FINDS BED IN FLAMES.

The blaze was discovered by Mrs. Michael Dullahan, who lives on the third floor with her husband and three children. It is believed that the fire started on this floor.

Dullahan had gone to work, and Mrs. Dullahan was in bed with her six-months-old son, John, when she smelled smoke. Opening the door, she found the hallway filled with suffocating fumes. Knowing that her two children, Marion, five years, and James, four years, were in another room, the mother groped her way there, calling for them. When she reached the room she failed to find the children. Their bed was on fire.

She heard them calling in the kitchen. Again the mother fought her way through the smoke, found the frightened little ones and helped them to the stairway. Here she met Patrolman George Hallfred and Police Sergt. Andrew Twombley, John Duffy and the Dullahan family to the street, where Mrs. Dullahan collapsed.

BREAK DOWN DOOR.

Then it was remembered that Mrs. Annie Valente and her sister and children upstairs had not been heard from. The officer and the citizens dashed up the stairs. They found the door of the Valente apartment closed and locked. Their shoulders broke it down.

Mrs. Valente and her five days' old infant were only partially conscious. Catherine Bruce and little Thomas Valente, aged two years, were in another room. All o fthem were carried out. Mrs. Valente was placed in a doctor's care, after she had been carried to the Anglin home next door.

On the top floor, where the Manning and Burke families lived, the mothers aroused their children and took to the roof. Then they made their way to the street by way of the next house and escaped without difficulty.

Mrs. Mary Duffy, another occupant, was rescued by Sergeant Crowley of the Joy street station.

All three of the rescuers were scorched. They lost eyebrows and hair.

The damage is placed at $1,500, both the third and fourth floors being burned out. Children playing with matches is believed to be the cause of the fire.

CURLEY SPLIT MARKS END OF WARD CONTROL

TAMMANY CLUB DOMINATION IS TO BE LOST THROUGH LEADERS' QUARREL.

The break between Senator Thomas F. Curley and Alderman James M. Curley, which occurred openly at last night's meeting of the Tammany Club, marks, it is believed in city political circles, the end of the Curleys' domination of Ward 17, which has been absolute since 1902. Although Curley himself admitted to-day that he had severed all relations with Thomas F. Curley, and the latter's friends retaliate by saying that the Alderman will go down to defeat in Thursday's primaries before Theodore A. Glynn.

The best of feeling has not prevailed between the two for some time and their differences were brought to the straining point when Michael J. McKittrick defeated Senator Curley so decisively for re-election last Tuesday. The breach was opened wide at last night's meeting when Alderman Curley declared he was going to get the head of "Tom" Curley's friend, Foreman William Clerc of the Roxbury yard of the sanitary department, because Clerk had told several members of the Tammany Club for breaches of the rules of the department. Clark is under Sanitary Superintendent Daniel H. Gillespie, who is treasurer of the Tammany Club. Gillespie and the alderman are not on friendly terms just at present.

Alderman Curley's friends believe he will be stronger by cutting loose from "Tom" Curley. The latter has sustained two defeats for office since the Tammany Club was formed, once by Michael J. McKittrick for Representative and last Tuesday by McKittrick for Senator. Alderman Curley announces that he will conduct his own campaign for John H. Moran, without any speakers except himself and with no workers at the polls.

MILK FAMINE BEGINS; FARMERS HOLD SUPPLY

PRODUCERS IN REVOLT TO-DAY ARRANGE TO COMPETE WITH TRUST IN BOSTON.

Boston is face to face with a temporary milk famine, to be followed by lower prices. On account of the war between the contractors and the farmers the supply fell off to-day.

But a committee of Worcester county producers came to Boston to-day to arrange for a special refrigerator car to carry in the Worcester county supply in competition with the Milk Trust.

The farmers are sending in hundreds of empty cans to-day. This is cutting down the supply to a dangerous point. When the competition car is put in service, however, they expect to have enough independent milk in Boston daily to bring the supply to normal and to sell at cut rates.

Farmers Hold Up Supply.

The refusal of many of the farmers to do further business with the Boston combination follows the latest threat of the combination, made in an effort to frighten the milk producers into accepting the contractors' terms. The contractors declared that they would pay a cent a can less to producers who did not sign their contracts by November 1. The producers sent in their milk, but will decline to accept the reduction. Finally the contractors sent out a letter saying they would take no milk from farmers who did not sign by to-day. The farmers of Worcester county and many others took them at their word and the revolt has become general.

From Rutland, where the output is generally 100 cans daily, not a single can was shipped to Boston yesterday. From West Rutland the supply dropped fifty cans. Colebrook and Muckepeague farmers are stopping the supply to the trust altogether. Only four of the forty New Braintree farmers have signed the Milk Trust contracts. The supply from New Braintree has dropped from 600 to 200 cans.

Contractors Make Butter.

The example of Barre Plains and Furness milk transactions is a specimen one, showing the transactions of the Boston combination. The trust pays 32½ cents a can of 8½ quarts. Without a can to insurring a cent of expense, the trust sells this at wholesale for 48 cents, a profit of 12½ cents. Sold at retail a can of this milk nets the trust 41 cents profit.

An employe of D. Whiting & Sons, told a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter to-day that the firm has been making over a ton of butter daily, and reducing the price from 45 to 31 cents, owing to the refusal of Boston to stand for nine-cent milk.

KAISER LANDS; FOG RUINS CELEBRATION

INTENDED TO BE A GORGEOUS PAGEANT, BECOMES A MELANCHOLY AFFAIR.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—If ever there was a melancholy landing of foreign royalty on British soil, it was at 2 this afternoon, when Kaiser Wilhelm of Germany stepped from the imperial yacht Hohenzollern upon the wharf at Portsmouth.

What was planned for a gorgeous pageant, boiling with joy and enthusiasm, might well have been mistaken for a funeral. The fog was so dense that the Kaiser and his consort had almost to feel for the Prince of Wales and the Duke of Connaught, who were on the landing stage to welcome them. The crowd could not see the royal visitors. The royal visitors could not see the crowd.

Kaiser Heavily Muffled.

There was not much cheering because nobody could tell when it was time to cheer. Water dripped from everything. The marines were soaked. The Kaiser's mustache almost dropped with moisture. His Majesty was evidently anxious lest the dampness would have an unfavorable effect on the throat trouble from which he has been suffering, and was muffled up until he looked almost like a walking mummy.

The original plan was for the Emperor and Empress to land, with their suite, early this morning and to make the occasion a grand festival. It was too foggy, however, to get into Portsmouth Harbor. The pilot tried it twice and then gave it up as too dangerous. The Hohenzollern dropped anchor near the Nab lightship and the announcement was made that it would stay there until 2 p. m. At 2 there was a momentary lifting of the fog, however, anchor was weighed in a hurry and a run was made for the landing stage. But the celebration was completely ruined.

Goes to Windsor.

The British warships were anchored in two lines, headed by the King Edward VII., Admiral Beresford's flagship, while a fleet of destroyers formed a third line. The Kaiser, in a British admiral's uniform, stood on the bridge of his yacht, but the battleships were almost indistinguishable amidships to him, and from the battleships' decks he could not be seen at all.

The salutes of twenty-one guns boomed out of the gloom, the ceremonies on the wharf were rushed through as quickly as possible, and everyone hurried to the special train which is now taking the party to Windsor.

STOWAWAY ON LINER GIVEN BEST ON BOARD

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—The Atlantic transport liner Minneapolis brought with her into port to-day a stowaway with a fund of reel nerve that established a record for ocean travel. The stowaway succeeded in getting a first-class cabin and then a cabin in the officers' quarters. He lived in the officers' mess.

He is one William Roseman, who says he is the son of a wealthy jewelry merchant of London, Ontario.

He declared that he had lost all his money in gambling in Montreal and that his father, to whom he had refused to help him, but he felt sure that the elder Roseman would now make good his passage money.

Roseman's trunks are being held at the Hotel Cecil in London, which he quietly left the morning the Minneapolis sailed. He took the boat train from the St. Pancras Station, London, and joined the Minneapolis, and stowed away for ten hours. He was smuggled from his hiding place by the second engineer, who, when he found he went directly to A. N. Norfolk, the purser, told him his hard luck story and was turned over to Captain Cannon.

Captain Cannon was so impressed with the cool way in which Roseman told his story and his assurance that his father would "make good" for him that he gave him a first cabin stateroom and assigned him a place at the first cabin table. There was some objection, which Roseman took humorously, and he was then assigned to the officers' quarters.

PARIS DOUBTS DE SAGAN-GOULD WEDDING STORY

PARIS, Nov. 11.—Representatives of Paris newspapers are distracted by conflicting reports that the Prince de Sagan and Mme. Anna Gould are about to be married, that they are not to be married and that the ceremony has already been performed.

Saturday night's announcement that the ceremony was performed in London a week and more ago was so positive and circumstantial that a good many accepted it as true. Friends of Mme. Gould have since convinced the newspapers, however, that she, at least, was not in London at the time the marriage is said to have taken place.

Mme. Gould is now at her Chateau Du Marais, at St. Cheron, where it is said she is ill and can see no one. Though the Prince de Sagan is known to visit her frequently, it has been impossible to find him for the past three days.

NO CATHOLIC CEREMONY FOR MISS GLADYS

Special to the Boston American.

NEWPORT, R. I., Nov. 11.—Advices from New York report that Archbishop Farley has announced that under no circumstances will he perform the marriage ceremony of Count Laszlo Szechenyi and Miss Gladys Vanderbilt on Dec. 10 next. Besides, His Grace will not permit any bishop or priest in the diocese to perform the ceremony unless such ceremony shall precede any similar form before a priest or minister of another faith or the signing of a civil contract of marriage.

Annoyed by Reports.

It was learned that the Archbishop has been much annoyed by published reports that he is to perform the marriage ceremony of the Hungarian nobleman and New York heiress. These reports have had it that there would first be a civil contract, then a ceremony in the Protestant Episcopal Church in deference to Miss Vanderbilt's religion, and finally that Archbishop Farley would perform the ceremony of his church. Prominent Catholics have been astonished by these reports, knowing how strongly the archbishop opposes "mixed marriages" or unions of Catholics and non-Catholics.

Mgr. Lavelle, vicar-general of the diocese and rector of St. Patrick's Cathedral, says, speaking with the authority of the archbishop:

"Archbishop Farley will not perform the marriage ceremony in any case in which one of the contracting parties is non-Catholic. He strongly disapproves of mixed marriages. He has never performed a ceremony of marriage except when the man and woman have been both Catholics.

"No bishop or priest in this diocese will perform a marriage ceremony when the man and woman have previously made a civil contract or been married after the form of any other religion or both. No ceremony can precede the ceremony of the church.

"No bishop or priest, of course, may marry a couple of which either the man or the woman is a non-Catholic, but not, as is well understood, within the walls of a church.

IDENTIFY MAN DEAD NEAR RAIL

NEWBURYPORT, Nov. 11.—The body of the young man found dead beside the Boston & Maine railroad track about one mile this side of Portsmouth yesterday was identified to-day as Parker D. Nourse of this city. Nourse, who is a brother of Chester Nourse, one of the members of the Brown University baseball team of last year, was about twenty-four years old and a shoemaker. With several companions he went to Portsmouth Saturday seeking work, but missed the last train back to this city. It is believed d that he boarded a freight train early yesterday, and was thrown from the top of one of the cars by striking a bridge at Hayes's Cut.

MORAN AGAIN WEARS DERBY

District Attorney John B. Moran, who has been "resting" since election, resumed active work at his office in the Law Courts building to-day. His "chipper" appearance is enhanced by a new black derby hat, replacing the brown "lid" he had been wearing, despite the protests of his friends that it was not a style becoming to him.

The District Attorney has been in his office since election, but has simply supervised the work. To-day he settled down again to details.

MISS THAYER "COMES OUT."

CLINTON, Nov. 11.—Fully 100 young society people of Boston will attend the coming sort party of Miss Evelyn Thayer, daughter of Colonel and Mrs. John R. Thayer of Lancaster, Friday. The coming out is being planned on an elaborate scale and will be an innovation in Lancaster.

WOMAN'S TRIAL IS DELAYED

Judge's Death Halts Proceedings in Case of Mrs. Bradley.

KILLED FORMER SENATOR

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—After calling the Bradley case to-day and causing the list of witnesses to be read, Justice Stafford adjourned court until 10 o'clock Wednesday morning, owing to the death of Justice McComas of the Court of Appeals.

Mrs. Bradley and her attorneys were in court ready to go on with the trial.

Relieved by Postponement.

Mrs. Bradley was visibly relieved at the postponement. When the frail little woman slipped into the court room almost unnoticed she was evidently struggling to retain her composure under a tremendous nervous strain. She was dressed in black with a touch of white at the throat, her wan face and hollow cheeks pallid in contrast with the sombre clothing. As she sat down between her attorneys she was just able to utter good morning, and for a time it was feared that she would collapse.

A curious crowd collected about the building to catch a possible glance of her. The court room itself was only partly filled at only those having a direct interest in the case were allowed to enter. The defendant was preceded by her mother who entered the court room shortly before her. Before attention could be focused upon either Mrs. Bradley or those who will figure in the trial as witnesses, adjournment was taken.

Insanity, not the emotional kind, but old-fashioned mental irresponsibility, is the bulwark behind which the celebrated counsel for Annie M. Bradley will try to shelter the frail little woman, who, driven to desperation by what she considered her wrongs and those of her children, shot down and killed former Senator Arthur F. Brown of Utah.

Woman Against Woman.

That Mrs. Bradley was not responsible when she killed the man who had lured and duped her, when his nature, so fickle that he was unable to fix it consecutively on any one woman for life, turned from her to another woman, is the claim of her defenders.

And on the testimony of another woman, Mrs. Annie Adams, for whom Brown repudiated his former love, the prosecution will base its hopes of sending Mrs. Bradley to the gallows.

Yet, while the court of Mrs. Bradley robbed her of the affections of the man whom she loved, and of the hope she had of bringing about his reformation and holding him to the right path through the remainder of his life, Mrs. Adams has only pity for the woman who killed him, and would save her if she could.

But her testimony is demanded by the State and she cannot refuse, and she will have to tell, under the searching examination of the prosecution, of the confidences of Brown in which he declared his doubts of Mrs. Bradley, his doubts of being the father of her children and his fear of the woman at whose hands he met death.

Deny Children to Mother.

While the eloquent attorney, Judge O. W. Powers of Utah will plead for her life and bring into evidence a letter from Brown acknowledging the paternity of her children, the two little manly boys, Arthur and "Cootie," will be denied the mother. They will not be permitted to sit at her side during the most trying period of her troublous life.

Her father, M. C. Patterson, will be in constant attendance at the trial. He is a veritable man, and those who recall the Patterson trial in New York will understand how far his presence may aid Mrs. Bradley, even as the presence of the venerable Mr. Patterson served to help hearts of the jurymen who were trying his wayward daughter, Nan.

Mrs. Bradley goes on trial for the slaying of former Senator Brown almost a year after the commission of the act, and will probably not be finished until the anniversary of the day when Senator Brown meant to make Mrs. Annie Adams, mother of the actress, Maud Adams, his wife.

BEAUTIFUL ANNIE M. BRADLEY AND THE CHILDREN WHO PRAY FOR HER.

MAYOR IN WARD 9 DEAL; CLARK FOR ALDERMAN

Now Given Credit for Swinging Quincy Club; Feared Break to Coulthurst.

Mayor Fitzgerald, it leaked out to-day, was responsible for the big surprise of yesterday in Ward 9 politics, the indorsement by "Jim" Donovan's Quincy Club of Ellery H. Clark for the aldermanic nomination in Wards 9 and 10 against Alderman Daniel L. Finnegan. Clark, it was said to-day, had been handed a "lemon" by the organization, for while the organization will give Clark the nomination it will not put him in any combinations in the Democratic wards on election day, thereby hoping to encompass his defeat.

Mayor Fitzgerald, it was said to-day by Ward 9 politicians, was responsible for the indorsement of Clark. Fearing that the old Harvard athlete and hero of the Olympic games of 1906 at Athens was going over to John A. Coulthurst, the Independence League candidate in the mayoralty fight, the Mayor asked "Jim" Donovan to indorse him for the Board, hoping thereby to keep him "regular." Donovan was perfectly willing to do this, as he believed that Clark would beat the organization candidate, Alderman "Dan" Finnegan, for the nomination anyway.

Clark, it is admitted, had the machine beaten to a standstill. The Ward 10 organization was with him, solid, and in Ward 9 he had as a champion Representative Timothy J. Callahan, who has shown on two occasions his ability to defeat the Donovan-Bowen machine in Ward 9. The "knife" is ready for Clark on election day, however.

THESE FINES CAUSE NEVER A PROTEST

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—The fines imposed on Walter McKay Jones, who said he was a Porto Rico coffee merchant, and Rhodes Lockwood, who described himself as a Boston capitalist, reminded the spectators in the West Side Court of the Standard Oil fines—it was so different. The men were before the court on complaint of Charles Smith, a colonial, who said they tried to run away after he had driven them about the Tenderloin. They denied having seen Smith but the court imposed a fine of one cent on each. Jones handed out a $10 bill, generously paying both fines.

MILLIONAIRE'S PALACE TO BE GIRL'S SCHOOL

Report That Edward F. Searles' "Barrington House" Is to Be Conservatory of Music.

GREAT BARRINGTON, Nov. 11.—A sudden and unexpected visit of Edward F. Searles, the Methuen multi-millionaire, to his former home here has again given rise to the story that he will convert his $1,000,000 palace, "Barrington House," into a conservatory of music for poor girls.

This is the first time Mr. Searles has entered his magnificent home here in five years. After a dispute with the town officials over taxes he declared that he would never reside here again, and moved to Methuen.

He arrived Saturday night by train, just as the football team of the Searles High School, which he endowed, was entering the vanquished North Adams eleven on its way home. The athletic association he helped straits financially, and will ask the multimillionaire's aid.

Mr. Searles spent Sunday inspecting his estate, but refused to discuss the reports. He left for Methuen this morning.

SEES HUSBAND PERISH IN FIRE

CHRICHVILLE, O., Nov. 11.—Unable to help him, the family of Jacob Reitz, farmer, saw him burn to death in his barn. Reitz went to the hayloft with a lantern. It overturned and set the hay on fire.

Reitz tried to escape through the small window, but his body stuck fast, and, with his head and arms out of the window, Reitz burned to death, the glare of the burning building showing his death agonies to his family. His wife fainted at the sight.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Nov. 11.—In spite of a severe rain storm which has made the roads heavy with mud, Edward Payson Weston, the aged pedestrian, left here at midnight determined to make his big record-breaking day thus far on his journey to Chicago and to cover at least eighty-one miles before he rests for the night at Rochester.

Although his schedule calls for a walk only as far as Palmyra, when he started from here he announced that he would push on to Rochester. This will mean a trip of four miles further than any day's walk he has thus far made.

Weston spent a quiet Sunday here, passing most of the morning in book writing letters. He retired last night at 6 o'clock and slept until 11, when he arose to prepare for to-day's tramp. He said as he prepared to leave that his feet were in better condition and that the blisters caused by his new shoes have disappeared. He said he was feeling fine.

BOY APPEALS TO COURT NOT TO FREE HIM

One of Trio Pleading Guilty of Breaks Seeks to Escape Evil Surroundings.

Fifteen-year-old Paul Sturgeon of Broadway, South Boston, one of three lads who pleaded guilty in the Brookline District Court to-day to two charges of breaking and entering and larceny, voluntarily asked the court to send him away somewhere so that he could be saved from evil associations.

"I am of weak mind and easily led," he told the court, "and I think that it would be better for me if I was looked out for more."

His mother and counsel asked him if he would not be willing to remain in the custody of his mother on probation if the court would allow it, but the boy demurred. The court held him in $100 till Saturday in order that the State Board of Charity might have time to consider a place for him to be sent, as the court was unwilling to make any disposition of the case that will put a criminal record on him.

Paul is one of the boys arrested in Arlington last week by a policeman, who corralled the gang at the point of a revolver and trailed them to Arlington lockup. Three of them, Paul, his eighteen-year-old brother, Everett H. Sturgeon, and George Wilson, twenty years, of Buffalo, N. Y., were wanted by the Brookline police on charges of breaking into James C. Rooney's furnishing store at No. 1 Harvard square, Brookline, and taking cash and goods to the value of $55 on November 5; also for entering a Harvard Square fruit store on October 25. All three pleaded guilty to the charges to-day.

Everett H. Sturgeon was held in $500 for the higher court, and Wilson, the oldest of the trio, was held in $1,000 for the same.

LABOR PROBES LINEHAN DEER ISLAND WORK

Building Trades Section to Investigate Charge of Non-Unionism.

ACCUSATIONS CAUSE STIR

At a meeting to be held this afternoon the building trades section of the Central Labor Union will take up in detail the charge that the Atlas Construction Company is employing non-union laborers, who are doing structural iron work in the contract for building a boundary wall at Deer Island.

There was talk yesterday in labor circles of a committee visiting the island today to investigate. The charge has caused a great stir in political and labor ranks, for Senator Frank J. Linehan of the Atlas Company is a union man himself, being a member of Boston Bricklayers' Union No. 3.

100 Without Cards.

John F. Conway, permanent business agent of Boston Laborers' Union No. 223, reports yesterday to that body that he had visited Deer Island and found 100 English speaking laborers without union cards, and that all were working for twenty-five cents an hour. Under union rules they should receive thirty. According to this report such laborers are getting $2 a day for eight hour day and should be paid $2.40.

Business Agent Conway said he was told by Manager Frank Conroy that it was the policy of the Atlas company to employ none but union men, and that it was up to the union agent to see that the policy is enforced.

Threat to Withdraw.

On November 9 the section received and accepted a report from Cornelius P. Shea, secretary of Teamsters' Union No. 191, and Business Agent Edward J. Burns, that all carpenters, teamsters and engineers employed by the Atlas company were union men. About a week ago, according to a statement issued to the press by the secretary of the governing board, the section threatened to order all the job all union men if the work was not completely unionized. The section appointed a committee to confer with the Atlas people and try to straighten out the tangle.

John J. Kennedy, who represents organized labor in the Finance Commission, and who was attacked by Senator Linehan in his South Boston speech yesterday, said today that the only non-union men employed by the Atlas company at Deer Island are builds laborers, who are doing structural work.

BROTHER OF BAKER ABSENT ON SECRET TRIP

Goes on Secret Mission in Hunt for Slayer of Boston Clubman.

ON TRAIL OF SUSPECT

Prepared to make an arrest when the result of the analysis for poison in the stomach of Walter F. Baker becomes known, Pinkerton detectives in New York are closely watching a man whom they believe to be responsible for Baker's death.

They assert that they can account for every minute of the interval of an hour and a half, which has been puzzling them in following the movements of the Boston clubman on the night he died, and they are prepared to clear up the mystery when word comes from Boston to act.

Three chemists are now at work on the poison test and the result of their labors may be made known to those interested at any time now.

Meanwhile Edward F. Baker is absent from his home in Boston on a mysterious mission, believed to be in connection with the hunt for those responsible for the death of his brother.

Brother Absent.

According to his private secretary, T. H. Cummings, he is in New York working on the case of his brother, while his household, at his Newbury street home says that Mr. Baker is on the verge of nervous prostration and has gone into the country for a few days to recuperate.

"He told me he would try and forget the case for a few days," he said, "and although I know at the present time where he is, he requested me to keep his where abouts quiet."

Walter Farnsworth Baker kept a diary. His life with the Hurds, husband and wife, and the others of the little party with whom he spent practically all of his time, was set down for a period of several months.

Diary Records Gay Life.

Baker's imperfectly kept diary is in part a reflection from the "great white way" of New York after dark. Theatres, dinners, suppers, and always with those associates whose names have been recently brought into more or less prominence because of his mysterious death. When there were excursions to the resorts of New Jersey; when there were almost daily trips from Boston, N. J., to New York, it was related in the account of his movements, kept by Baker. And through it all there appears the "trilogy"—Mr. and Mrs. Hurd and Mr. Young as his inseparable companions.

MILLIONAIRE BOY SHOT BY JEALOUS VALET

Confidential Companion of Young Man Kills Self After Firing at Employer.

BULLET IN BOY'S SKULL

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Nov. 11.—Paul Gilbert Thebaud, Jr., seventeen-year-old son of the multi-millionaire and society man of the same place, is making a desperate fight for life to-day at the palatial home, Willair, in Westchester County, where he was shot yesterday by John Bjorlin, his confidential companion, who then committed suicide. The best experts that money could procure have been at the young man's bedside since they were rushed to the country home at sixty miles an hour in the great Thebaud automobile.

Thebaud is the victim of what is believed to have been a plot to take a dozen lives.

Bjorlin, it was learned later, had vowed to kill not only his young master, but every other servant on the big estate. He had their names down on a list, with the millionaire's son marked "No. 1."

But the sight of his first victim must have brought him out of his murderous mania, for when he had shot the boy he passed only a few seconds before turning the revolver upon himself. He fired a ball through his brain and died at once.

Bullet Enters Skull.

The bullet entered the front of the boy's head and crushed the skull. Little hope was expressed at first, but skilled hands removed the bone and bullet from the brain, and to-day it was said he probably would recover.

Many theories as to the cause for the strange actions of Bjorlin, who went into the lad's bedroom, shot him while he slept and ended his own life beside the bed, are advanced to-day.

Bjorlin, who was a middle-aged Dane, was devoted to the youth, for whom he acted as instructor in languages and "gentleman valet." It is said Bjorlin was jealous if any other servant about the place gave any special attention to his young master, and openly charged them with "trying to curry favor." When the family was in Europe, Bjorlin acted as guide and companion to the lad, and was always with him.

The elder Thebaud was absolutely at a loss to explain the shooting to-day. He said Bjorlin was always anxious for the welfare of Paul.

It is reported that Paul tired of the attentions of the Dane and became roughy to him, throwing him into a passion of despair because he felt that he was losing his place in the family affairs.

Four Years in Service.

Bjorlin had been with the Thebauds for four years and was considered one of the most desirable men that could be retained in such a position. He spoke seven languages fluently and was said to have come from an excellent family in Denmark.

A close inquiry is being made to-day among the servants of the place to trace the recent actions of Bjorlin and to seek to verify a report that while under the influence of liquor he declared a list of people about the place headed by Paul's name and said he would "get them all."

TRIES SUICIDE, IS FOUND NEAR DEATH BY WIFE

Malden Man Taken to Hospital After Desperate Attempt on His Own Life.

Crimson drops that soaked through the ceiling of the room where Mrs. Joseph Card and her three step-children were sitting, led her to a room at 42 Ash o'clock to-day where she found her husband in an almost dying condition from cuts on his body which he had inflicted with a razor.

The cards live at No. 3 Nevada avenue, Malden. The head of the house had been out for several days. When he returned he acted strangely. He went up stairs and in a few minutes the wife heard a noise as though something heavy had fallen upon the floor.

Blood Drops on Floor.

She paid no attention to the noise, however, for a few minutes. Then drop after drop of the red fluid fell upon the floor.

"What is that, mamma?" asked one of the children.

"It looks like blood," said one of the other children.

Mrs. Card hurried upstairs. Her husband lay upon the floor, barely breathing because of the great loss of blood. Mrs. Card and Dr. K. A. Stevens summoned.

The physician found that Card had gashed himself in the throat, on one wrist, across one thigh and below one knee. The injured man was hurried to the Malden hospital.

"Has an Even Chance."

"He has about an even chance," said the doctor.

"I don't think he was himself," said the wife. "He had been away for a few days and had just come home. I don't know of any reason why he should want to kill himself. The three children are his by a former wife."

TO TRY FOR RECORD OF THE LUSITANIA

The Critic.

The critic is of an analytical temperament, and is happiest when he can dissect an art or performance into the smallest detail, and lay threadbare the hidden motives of his fellow-men.

He detects a flaw in a priceless jewel, spouts indignation for the thorn of the rose that pricks his tender fingers, and waxes eloquent on the imperfect rhythm of a famous poem. The greatest critics in the world have been unable to discover the slightest defects in Dr. Burkhart's Vegetable Compound, the famous remedy being above every criticism. The action is so perfect and the results so satisfactory that all criticism immediately ceases; that they have only words of praise for the remedy which renders invaluable services in cases of rheumatism, catarrh, constipation, female complaints, indigestion, etc. Thirty days' treatment, 50c. ASK RAILROAD BOARD TO END BRIDGE TIE-UP

Boylston Street Property Owners Appeal to Force "L" to Rush Delayed Work.

Aroused by great business losses, Boylston street people representing several millions of dollars of property appealed today to the State Railroad Commission to give them relief from the trolley tie-up due to the delayed operations on Boylston street bridge.

At the same time it was declared on good authority that there is friction between the city administration and the Boston Elevated Railway Company, which is holding back the bridge work, and may delay the opening of Boylston street for a long time.

Delay on West End Lines.

While this delay continues, thousands and thousands of Boston people and residents of nearby towns are subjected to delays of from half an hour to an hour on each trip they take through the trolley arteries passing through the West End. These delays fall upon 200,000 to 250,000 fares daily.

The petitions of the Boylston street business men and property owners between Exeter street and Massachusetts avenue, whose interests suffer an immense loss through the taking of trolley cars from that street, allege that the conditions are intolerable; that the work on Boylston street bridge is unnecessarily delayed; that means could easily be had to relieve the situation, and that appeals to the city and to the Boston Elevated have been fruitless. The Railroad Commission is urged to interfere and to compel the Boston Elevated to send the cars up Boylston street. This would also relieve the intolerable Huntington avenue crush.

Deny Right to Act.

The Railroad Commission, it is said, has held that it is without authority to change trolley routes on its own initiative, but it was declared to-day that since the petitions have been filed, if public sentiment is sufficiently expressed, the commission may take some action.

James Thomas Pugh, counsel for the Hotel Lenox, who has offices in the Pemberton building, filed some of the petitions and also signed the recent real estate men's petition to the Boston "L."

"It seems to me," said Mr. Pugh to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter to-day, "that the Board of Railroad Commissioners has a general supervision over such matters, and if the city and the Elevated are having a disagreement as to the division of the expense in the rebuilding of Boylston street bridge, the Commission should act in the public interest.

"Boylston street business is suffering a great loss, and this is only one phase of it, quite apart from the great public inconvenience due to the sending through Huntington avenue all cars connecting with the suburbs of Boston in that direction. There is a very big public interest involved aside from the losses of Boylston street property owners."

BOGUS COUNT'S WIFE IS GOING BACK TO EUROPE

Edith Van Buren Defends International Marriages in Spite of Her Experience.

BETTER WOOERS, SHE SAYS

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—Edith Van Buren, Countess di Castlemando, wealthy, beautiful and accomplished, who is preparing to sail for Europe, after having obtained a legal separation from her titled husband, has aroused much discussion by her original views on international marriages in a recent interview.

The Countess defends, or at least explains the popularity of the titled Europeans as a wooer of American girls as follows:

"There has never been an American girl who married in the French, English or Italian nobility, who did not improve both mentally and socially by the alliance. Position is guaranteed with the daughter of titles. But I do not say that the American woman weds with that end in view.

"Are Superior Wooers."

"None can dispute the foreigner's superiority in wooing. That is the reason for the international marriage and the increasing popularity of the titled foreigner in America."

And yet, Countess di Castlemando's experience has been unusually severe. Wedded seven years ago to the fascinating Neapolitan, who introduced himself as one of Italy's nobility, she was shocked to find, within a few days after her marriage, that her husband's title was spurious. By the payment of a large sum of money she was "arranged," and the title made legitimate. Bad as this was, she was further distressed to find that he was a criminal, a so-called "Camorrist," who had served in a penal institution and was still under the surveillance of the police.

The suit for separation was not contested.

Of a President's Family.

She is the great-grandniece of President Van Buren and the daughter of the late General Thomas R. Van Buren, formerly American Minister at Tokio. Her mother was the daughter of Joseph Sheffield, who founded the Sheffield Scientific School at Yale; so she was a niece by marriage of the late William Walter Phelps.

Miss Van Buren went to the Klondike in 1898 with Mrs. Maxwell D. Hitchcock, widow of Commander Hitchcock, U. S. N., of this city. She staked out a claim near Dawson and sold canned goods to the miners on week days and sang hymns to them on Sundays. From the Klondike Miss Van Buren started around the world for New York. She met her Camorrist Count in Nice.

Her mother, Mrs. Thomas R. Van Buren, died in February, 1901, leaving the larger part of her estate to her daughter. After that the Count and Countess paid several visits to North America. She was here last year, after she sent him to jail in Geneva.

PASTOR URGES UNITED WAR ON LIQUOR EVIL

PROVIDENCE, Nov. 11.—Declaring that in the seven months he had been in charge of the Church of the Holy Nativity at Thornton he had seen one man killed and that others were fast approaching death as a result of the "arrogant" lawlessness of the liquor traffic in the town of Johnston, Rev. Herbert W. Barker appealed to the people of the church yesterday to aid the new police chief in his effort to make the town clean.

He urged his parishioners not only to encourage the enforcement of law under the new administration, but also to strive, each in his own home, to check the tendency to Sunday indulgence, and to come out for righteousness. Rev. Mr. Barker said:

"Any man who does things for himself who acts only with his own selfish interest in view, is the slave of the devil. That is what sin is—selfishness.

"The millions of this town have, I believe, reached one of those crises when come in the history of every community, when a reform which is sadly needed becomes possible. In order that such a reform may become a reality, every citizen, every man, woman and child must come out openly for righteousness.

"Men and women of Thornton, you have a great opportunity before you, to make this a clean town. The liquor traffic is at the bottom of all the evil that goes on in this town, and you, the citizens of Thornton, control the situation. The matter now rests in your hands."

BOSTON CIGAR STORE BELLE WEDS EDITOR

It has just leaked out that Harriet V. Goodwin, one of the famous sisters of cigar store fame, is a bride of Harold P. Bate, one of the assistant editors of the Van Norden Magazine, published in New York. The date of the wedding is given out as October 28.

Two weeks ago Miss Goodwin took the afternoon express for New York, telling her mother, Mrs. Sarah Goodwin, of her 25 Thorndike street, Brookline, and her sister, Mrs. George Winslow, that she was going to New York to spend Sunday with friends.

Knowing of Halsey's friendship for Bate, the young girl's mother and sister entertained freely suspicions as to the cause of her hurried visit to New York. When she returned home the following Tuesday they had many questions to ask.

The young woman disconcerted for a time, but finally when it was discovered that she was sedulously guarding a new plain gold band ring she confessed.

AGED MAN HANGS IN PERIL, 35 FEET IN AIR

Because of the breaking of a landing of the fire escape on the Bailey Building on Pleasant street, Malden, John Bailey, eighty years old, was left suspended by the arms thirty-five feet in the air. He was rescued by Edward Hyerstine, the janitor, who was attracted to the scene by the old man's cries.

WOMEN AROUSED BY DR. ELIOT'S DOCTRINES

HARVARD PRESIDENT'S VIEWS ON EDUCATION BRINGS OUT STRONG PROTEST.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—President Eliot's recent declaration regarding the education of woman in which Harvard's head said that it should no longer be a mere imitation of that of man, but should have for its purposes her preparation for motherhood, has aroused a storm of discussion among representative New York women.

Mrs. John Sherwin Crosby, president of the Women's Democratic Club, says:

"I question whether the education of man is yet sufficiently far advanced to qualify him to decide upon the education that woman should have. There is, of course, a broad, fundamental education that is just as necessary to develop the powers of a woman as of a man. There is also little in regard to the training of children that the man as well as the woman ought not to learn."

Mrs. Harriet M. Johnston Wood, lawyer and partner of her husband, William H. Wood, didn't have much patience to spare for Dr. Eliot's views.

"True, the training of children always had been women's occupation," said Mrs. Wood, "and to the exclusion of other things, until her horizon had narrowed and her mind had been warped. Let the training of children be her duty, but let it also be the man's to do his share. Each should assist if the proper balance is to be given to the development of the child. Any education exclusively for men or for women is imperfect. Masculine and feminine must co-operate eternally; each supplies the complement to the other.

"I should like to know by what divine authority certain occupations were set aside for men, and certain ones for women? Every occupation in the world is for woman if she can do it well. Her physical and mental limitations, not the mandate of man, are to determine these things.

"A woman's sphere is not her dooryard, but the wide world. It is not her duty alone to care for the children she has borne, but to have at heart the interests of the children of the world. If she had taken her place in government and in public affairs, there would not be the problem of race suicide which some men presume to command her to solve by bringing more children into the world, instead of doing a woman's work in improving the condition of those already born.

"And if women shirk this part of the work which legitimately belongs to them, let the men insist that they shoulder their share of the responsibility. Good government is only good housekeeping; you might as well expect to find a house perfectly managed without women as to look for school boards and city governments perfectly administered without their aid.

"I object to any man telling me what I shall learn or what I shall do or not do, and those who set themselves up to dictate to us should remember that the blood of our revolutionary ancestors runs in women's veins as well as men's. We will not tolerate a step backward."

TRAINS HALT FOR FUNERAL

Every wheel stops for five minutes today on 8,353 miles of railroad in eleven states as a tribute to the memory of Charles E. Perkins, former president of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railroad, whose funeral takes place at 1 o'clock at Westwood. This impressive mark of respect affects every car wheel, from express flyer to hand car, in the States of Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, Kansas, Nebraska, Iowa, Missouri, Colorado and Wyoming.

The same rule applies to the Boston offices of the railroad, when for five minutes at the time of the funeral, no business is transacted. The order was issued by Vice-President Willard.

CHARGES DEATH OF ARTIST TO DORA M'DONALD

Chicago Police Say Rich Gambler's Wife Was Infatuated With Man Now Dead.

POETRY TELLS OF LOVE

She gave a love that knew no bounds.
The rest of the story is old.
Again he strayed and this time he made
A mistake she could never forgive.

CHICAGO, Nov. 11.—Was Dora McDonald, wife of Michael McDonald, gambler, and Chicago's woman of mystery, suffering from some strange mental malady, or was she so insane from jealousy that she killed Webster Guerin, the handsome artist, last February? This is the question which must be decided when the strangest tragedy in the history of Chicago is unraveled. Mrs. McDonald, tall, handsome, graceful and the wife of a wealthy man, has, since the killing of the artist, been unable to make any coherent statement. She failed to recognize her husband, the man who sacrificed his fortune in an attempt to free her and then died of a broken heart. It is alleged by the police that the handsome prisoner was infatuated with the artist and that she met him secretly for years. Did she kill him because she knew he was about to wed another?

Last February Guerin was shot in his office. In the room with him was Mrs. McDonald. She was immediately arrested. She appeared to be mentally unbalanced. She failed to recognize her husband. She could tell nothing of the death of Guerin. The police investigated and say they learned that for some years the artist and McDonald's handsome wife have been meeting at his rooms. It is hinted that the artist benefited from his friendship with the woman. He was soon to wed a Chinese girl.

Mrs. McDonald is said to have been jealous of any attentions he showed any other woman. Among her possessions were found a number of poems. One verse read:

She gave a love that knew no bounds.
The rest of the story is old.
Again he strayed and this time he made
A mistake she could never forgive.

The police and those who have tried to solve the strange tragedy wonder if this verse is a clew to the mystery which surrounds the death of the artist and the fate of beautiful Mrs. McDonald.

SINGER EJECTS WIFE FROM HIS WEBSTER HOME

WEBSTER, Nov. 11.—It has become known that Joseph C. Miron, for years a prominent singer, has ejected his wife, as given up his Winter tour. He refused to his home unexpectedly and ejected Mrs. Miron from the handsome home on the shore of Webster Lake. Just what is back of the unusual procedure has not become public, but it is said that certain letters were received Mr. Miron while he was in Newark, N. J., a week ago, which was directly responsible for his decision in turn. The ejection of Mrs. Miron was accompanied by Deputy Sheriff Maurice T. Clare.

Miron was married fifteen years ago, his wife being Louise Kearnes, daughter of Patrick Kearnes of Boston, the ceremony being performed in that city by the Rev. Father O'Connell. They have had five children, all of whom are now with their father in the Miron homestead. From outward appearances the couple had always been perfectly happy, and their neighbors were among the most surprised when news of the affair became public.

COLD WAVE COMING EAST

A cold wave, which is reported as sweeping eastward, is said to be due in Boston to-night. Yesterday the West was covered by a great area of high pressure which was accompanied by some snow. At Marquette, Mich., six inches of snow fell and a heavy gale is now reported from Lake Superior. There are indications that to-night will see the end of Indian Summer temperatures of the last few weeks.

KENNEDY THREATENS TO SUE SENATOR LINEHAN

CENTRAL LABOR UNION'S REPRESENTATIVE ON FINANCE BOARD ROUSED BY CHARGES.

A threat of legal action against Senator Frank J. Linehan is made by John F. Kennedy, the representative of the Central Labor Union upon the Boston Finance Commission, because of the charge made by Linehan at his South Boston "rallies" last night. Linehan charged that Kennedy went to Manager Frank Conroy of Linehan's Atlas Construction Company and sought a bribe to remain silent in connection with the commission's investigation of Linehan's contract for building the Deer Island wall.

"The incident will not be allowed to close here," said Mr. Kennedy to-day. "I can't say now just what legal action I shall take, but Senator Linehan will hear from me."

Has Two Witnesses.

Kennedy denies absolutely the charges made by Linehan and says that the only conversation he had with Conroy took place in the presence of two witnesses who will substantiate what he says.

Senator Linehan's bombshells at his "rallies" in Gray's Hall, Ward 14, and at the courthouse in Ward 15 was the worst castigation publicity made against any individuals in public life in Boston in many years. He flayed every member of the commission unmercifully and made charges of serious kind against each of the six members, as well as against Counsel Michael J. Sugrue.

The commission is prepared for fronting at to-night's session, when the investigation of Linehan's Deer Island contract will be resumed.

Accuses Them All.

Former Congressman John A. Sullivan's vote in Congress against the pure food bill was due, Linehan stated in his campaigns, to Sullivan's interests in the distilling business. Secretary Farley of the commission was known among his associates, Linehan said, as a "rough-house lawyer and fighter."

Commissioner John F. Moors was accused as acting while secretary of the Public School Association as an agent to book publishing companies.

He repeated the charges made by him at last Thursday night's session of the Finance Commission against Commissioner Sughrue and Chairman Matthews, accusing Sughrue of collecting money for the county while assistant district attorney for the rent of an office which he never used, and Matthews of buying land at three times its value from his own relative for fire headquarters on Bristol street, while Mayor.

"Where Are 'Frisco Funds?"

He took up the family of Commissioner Crocker for three questions back and reviewed the famous Crocker will case. Of Commissioner George A. O. Ernst he said:

"Ernst—George A. O. Ernst—the man who was driven out of the School Committee by Mrs. Julia Duff. Ernst, you are the agent of Waldo Bros. Company, who have been selling cement to the city for twenty-five per cent less than the market value.

"Ernst, your agents came down to Deer Island and threatened us with trouble if we did not give Aldrich Bros. the work which Waldo Brothers are the New England agents for. But we didn't, so, Ernst, are you making the fight for Waldo Brothers because we refused to give them the work?"

Senator Linehan also made the sensational charge that $100,000 of the $600,000 raised in Boston for the relief of the San Francisco sufferers in the earthquake disaster was missing. He asked Commissioner Moors, who was agent in San Francisco for the Massachusetts Association for the Relief of California, to tell where this money had gone to.

GIVES UP $1,000,000 HOBBY FOR WIFE.

This interesting snap-shot shows the well-known face of J. Pierpont Morgan, and beside him the less-known features of his wife, for whom he has decided to dispose of his famous prize-winning dogs, which he has been collecting for more than eighteen years at an enormous cost.

COPYRIGHT 1906 G. G. DAIN

$1,000,000 DOGS SACRIFICED AS AN ANNOYANCE

Mrs. J. Pierpont Morgan Disturbed by Barking of Prize-Winning Canines.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—Complying with the request of Mrs. Morgan, who is hereafter to spend most of her time on the estate at Highland Falls, J. P. Morgan has decided to get rid of his famous kennels of highbred collies, which has been one of his pet hobbies for eighteen years, and on which he has expended in that time nearly $1,000,000.

True to the spirit which has dominated him in forming the Gregston kennels, the most celebrated in America, if not in the world, the finest will not sell his pets, it is understood, but has presented the great collection of blue-blooded canines to Alfred Blewitt, the manager of the kennels, who, in the five years that he has been with Mr. Morgan, has had no small part in bringing the kennels to their present high position.

Childhood Home of Mrs. Morgan.

In this connection it is understood that Mr. Morgan has given to his wife as a gift the beautiful Highland Falls estate, and Mrs. Morgan has expressed her intention of spending practically the whole year there after the present season, except at such times during the Winter as her social duties may call her Madison avenue residence.

Unlike Mr. Morgan, she has little interest in Europe or transcontinental travel. As Miss Tracy she was born in Highland Falls and loves the place as her home.

That the collies in Gregston Kennels were of the bluest of bluebloods, that the ribbons and cups they have won in shows all over the country are legion, and that their purchase and maintenance have cost a fortune weighed little with Mrs. Morgan against the fact that the presence of the kennels so close to her residence was the source of a serious annoyance to her.

Disturbed by Barking.

She was much disturbed by their barking, for even blue-blooded collies bark, and the more aristocratic the louder the noise. Then, too, their world-wide reputation brought many sightseers to the estate, who, as a general rule, were made welcome.

There were, however, many times when the visitors constituted a serious annoyance to the mistress of the estate, and her frequent objection, expressed in unmistakable terms, that the enjoyment of her home was greatly detracted from by the proximity of the dogs led Mr. Morgan to decide shortly after his recent return from abroad, to get rid of the whole kennel.

RODE THROUGH THE AIR ON TOP OF BALLOON

Daring Feat of Captain Lovelace of Pommern Feature of Trip from Philadelphia.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—"I rode the greater part of the trip from Philadelphia in the rigging and on top of the Pommern, and by this means we were able to ascertain exactly the different currents of air. This enabled us to control the route of the balloon so that we were at all times masters of our course."

This statement was made yesterday by Captain J. J. Lovelace, who inaugurated a new feat in aerial navigation, by riding most of the time during the Pommern's 134-mile journey Saturday, on top of the big gas bag.

Safe as Though on Solid Ground.

"Of course, to a layman it would appear a very perilous thing to do," said Captain Lovelace, "but I felt as safe as if I was on the solid ground. I am something of a climber and have been a sea captain. Then I have had a large experience in ballooning, and the height at which I ran seemed to affect me to the least.

"When we left Philadelphia I left the basket and climbed over the netting until I was seated on top of the bag. From that position I was able to judge better of the different currents.

"All went well until we reached Allentown, when we struck a current of air that would have carried us into the Atlantic ocean. From my position on the top of the bag I could see that if we descended we would be able to change our course, so I called down the order to descend.

Driven Over Staten Island.

"We did so, and in the lower strata we were met by a cross wind that took us to Matteawan, N. J. Here we again ran into adverse winds and forced to rise. Then we were carried again in the right direction and were soon over Staten Island.

"On reaching the ocean we jockeyed some and finally made a landing in the Bronx. We could easily have continued our trip to Boston, but we had accomplished the object of the ascension and were content."

GIVE PASTOR $2,000 PURSE AT FAREWELL

St. Vincent's Parishioners in Tears at Reception to Rev. George J. Patterson.

At his farewell reception in St. Vincent's Church, South Boston, last night, while half the 2,000 people present were in tears, the Rev. George S. Patterson, who has been transferred by Archbishop O'Connell to the Cathedral of the Holy Cross, was given a purse of $2,000. The gift was made up by Father Patterson's parishioners, residents of other South Boston parishes and Boston business men. Thomas R. Reddy, one of the oldest members of the parish, made the presentation.

It was a affecting farewell to the pastor, who has administered to St. Vincent's parish for just two years, and the people present showed the deepest feeling when the retiring clergyman made his last address to them as their pastor.

The Rev. Father Brogan introduced as the presiding officer Martin Lomasney, and St. Vincent's boys' orchestra and the sanctuary choir gave several musical selections, and then Dr. Herbert J. Keenan spoke for the parish. The Rev. Robert J. Johnson told of the unceasing labors of Father Patterson during his two years' tenure at St. Vincent's, and similar addresses were made by the Rev. James B. Tivy, the new pastor, and others.

Clergymen from several other parishes were present, including the Rev. Fathers Brogan, Maley, Edwards, Lamb, Dever of Newton, Murphy of Whitman, P. J. Lyons, Brennan, Agnews, O'Brien and Flanigan of Medford.

The Committee on Arrangements consisted of a hundred members of the St. Vincent's Holy Name Club.

SLAYER HAPPY STARTING LIFE TERM IN JAIL

NEWFANE, Vt., Nov. 11.—William Fairbanks has started his life sentence here for the murder of Mary Grout at Saxton's River, May, 25.

When seen in his lonely cell he presented a decidedly different appearance than at any time since he has been confined here. He looked happy, rested and relieved. His air of despondency has given place to good cheer and he talked in an enthusiastic vein.

He said he felt like a new man, now that the trials attending the four weeks' trial has ended.

"I feel as though I had been granted a new lease of life," he began, as he looked through the iron bars, a picture of happiness. "It is pretty tough to stand a trial like what I have passed through and a great relief when it is over.

"Naturally I am well pleased to escape the gallows and that may account for my good spirits. I have considerable rheumatism in my right leg, and my head frequently aches as a result of what I have recently been through."

"I suppose you will be glad when you are at work in some department of making shoes."

"Yes, I will be more at rest to have my mind occupied in some other line than that of my trial."

Judge E. W. Gibson, chief counsel for Fairbanks, was also seen to-day, and in an interview said that he should not file any appeal with the Supreme Court based on exceptions allowed at the trial.

THREE MOURN LOSS OF CASH

In visits made to three houses during the early hours of the morning, a Malden burglar, who is known to the police simply as the "pants pocket thief," managed to secure a total of $100 in cash. He has been operating in Malden for two years and appears on an average of once a month. Nothing is ever disturbed in the house except the trousers hanging beside a man's bed. These are always emptied of the cash, even to pennies.

Those who reported losses were Samuel Bortnig of No. 9 Samuell street, $4.20; Jacob Steinberg, No. 104 Suffolk street, $84; Samuel Fall, No. 7 Suffolk street, $12, in each case the thief secured entrance to the house at house of a window.

LITTLE ONES ARE GLYNN'S VOTE WINNERS

Children of Ward 17 to Aid in Smashing the Curley Slate

For the first time in years there is a real live fight on in Ward 17 against the Tammany Club. The people are aroused and vow that they will smash the Curley slate in the coming primaries. Theodore A. Glynn, the candidate for the Board of Aldermen, is carrying everything before him, while the Ward Committee ticket, headed by John F. Lanergan, Thomas F. Phelan and John D. Conneran, candidates for the Common Council, will be swept into office on the 19th inst.

"Why," said "Teddy" Glynn, "all the children of the district are on our ticket in this fight. They will appeal to their fathers for votes. You know that counts in a political contest.

"Our opponents don't have to solicit the children, because, as they claim, they have a powerful organization and women and children for votes.

No Imaginary Playground.

"I am in favor of securing a playground and gymnasium for children. With myself in the Board of Aldermen and Phelan and Connors in the Common Council, both of whom are able to talk, I want to impress that strongly on the minds of the voters of the district—a real gymnasium will be procured for the district and not an imaginary one.

"This phony mass meeting business is pure buncombe. The voters are on to that proposition for a playground. They station members of the Tammany Club in every part of the hall to make motions for playgrounds. We won't swallow the proceedings of that meeting of Tammany members held last Friday.

"We are told of appropriations being made and approved, but that is only around election time. We promise our neighbors and friends in the district that we will use our best endeavors to secure a decent playground.

"We are pledged to speak and vote only for those measures that will be for the best interests of the whole people, and not the coterie of "knee breeches" politicians.

Needs of the Ward.

"I love all the children of the ward. I would be false to the name of "Teddy" were I otherwise. I will see to it that an order is introduced in the Board of Aldermen for the purchase of an excursion steamer to be used for the children during the hot Summer months.

"This can be secured if the people will elect myself and Mr. Phelan members of the city government, for we are both able to back up our arguments with forceful facts."

KILLED BY TRAIN.

ATHOL, Nov. 11.—Fred Searey of Worcester was run over by a train near the station here on the Boston & Albany railroad yesterday. He died on the way to the hospital.

OPEN RECOUNT IN CONTESTED CASES TO-DAY

Recount began in Faneuil Hall to-day on the Boston vote in certain contests at State election. The recount is in charge of Election Commissioners Shaw and Sanford. A few politicians were hanging about the outer hall of the recount room when the Commissioners started in at 9:30.

Election Commissioner Sanford said that the representative votes to be recounted would be taken up first. The entire city vote for Register of Probate for Suffolk will be taken up, except Wards 4, 13 and 19, but will not be ready before to-morrow.

In Ward 23 John J. Conway, Democrat and Independence League nominee, was defeated for a fourth Representative term by only ten votes by J. Henry Leonard. This is the closest vote to be recounted. In Ward 9 a gain of one more vote for Guild on the head of the ticket will make a total of 750, which will entitle the ward to one additional delegate to the State convention.

John M. McDonald, Democrat, of Ward 16; Ernest W. Woodside, Republican, of Ward 1, and Amos DeVito, Republican, of Ward 8, also have petitioned for recounts of their Representative vote.

SMASHES DISHES FOR 11-CENT DEBT

Because the landlord owed him eleven cents, John Samidna, a boarder at Joseph Mishna's lodging house, No. 94 Arlington street, Chelsea, proceeded to get his eleven cents' worth by smashing all the dishes in Mishna's china closet, according to the story told by Mishna to Sergeant Gallise in the Chelsea police station. He declared Samidna must get a new boarding house. Notwithstanding the fun he had, Samidna continued to demand his eleven cents and threatens to make another raid, Mishna declares, if the cash isn't coming.

GIRL'S ARREST IS PUZZLING STATE POLICE

Special to the Boston Americans.

WORCESTER, Nov. 11.—The police of this city are mystified by the report from New York that a young woman who was arrested under the name of Maude McBride but who is believed to be Mary Moore, an employe of the Lily Pond Houses in Shrewsbury where Charles L. Bigelow was killed last July, was held for the Worcester police.

"I don't want her," said Captain O'Day, chief of detectives.

"I don't want her, not even as a witness," said State Detective Patsy Murray.

It was asserted by both officers that they had made no request for arrest of the Moore girl.

Frank L. Phipps was tried on the charge of killing Hurnap, but the jury disagreed.

According to the New York police, they understand that the McBride or Moore girl was wanted in Worcester, and Lieutenant Griffin arrested her and she was held as a suspect in the Jefferson Market Police Court.

DIES A PAUPER; LEAVES RICHES

WORCESTER, Nov. 11.—James O'Brien, who died at the Bloomingdale asylum Wednesday, who was believed to be a pauper, and who was buried in the pauper section of the Newton cemetery, with only two persons attending the funeral mass, the undertaker and Rev. John S. Cullen, turns out to have been possessed of a fortune of $16,000 at the time of his death. O'Brien was eighty years of age, and was sent to the hospital from Watertown.

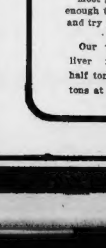
GIRL SHIVERS IN BED WHILE BURGLARS WORK

Delia Tierney, a servant in the home of John P. Sylvester, No. 34 Beacon road, Somerville, is suffering to-day from shock and terror caused by her unusual experience of seeing a burglar ransack her room early yesterday morning. Cowering beneath the bedclothes, she was afraid to make a sound until hours after the man had left. Aided by another man, the burglar ransacked the house and carried away money, jewelry, silverware and clothing valued at $1,000. Mr. and Mrs. Sylvester were away, and the servant was in charge of the house. Mary Rourke, employed by Mr. and Mrs. Roland T. Lincoln, was with her in bed, but was awakened by the burglar. Miss Tierney was so frightened she was unable to awaken her friend until daylight. She first heard the man enter her room about 2 o'clock. He threw a flash light across the bed, and as Miss Tierney lost her self control, now satisfied both girls were asleep. Then for an hour he and his accomplice ransacked the house.

This is how Miss Tierney describes how it feels to lie in bed and listen to burglars ruining the home.

20,000 PERISHED IN TURKESTAN QUAKE

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 11.—Twenty thousand may fall short of the total number killed in the recent earthquake in Russian-Turkestan. Official reports from the relief parties sent out following the news of Karatagh's destruction prove the first reports to have fallen far short of the truth. Karatagh, where about 4,000 died, was only one of many towns wiped out. Several of them, like Karatagh, were located under immense mountain slides. Others were completely leveled with the ground, crushing their inhabitants under the ruins of their own homes.



Otto Coke--The Fuel That's Made in Boston--Will Save You $2.00 on Every Ton You Burn.

Yes, and besides the saving, it's better than coal in every way. So, why pay 40 per cent. more.

Better, because it makes a quicker fire than coal and lasts just as long. A few shovels on the morning fire burns breakfast wonderfully.

Better, because it's clean and smokeless. Makes no dust or dirt and much less ashes.

Better, because it's made right here at home, where no "car famine" or "snow blockades" can interfere with a prompter delivery service than you ever knew on fuel.

Most grocers carry our half-bushel bags, holding enough to cook several meals. Order one to-day and try it. You'll like Otto Coke.

Don't Break Your Parents' Hearts by Foolish Marriages

By Beatrice Fairfax

FOR the last few weeks the newspapers have been full of the matrimonial ventures of a young woman of Philadelphia. She eloped with one man when, according to all reports, she was already married to another. The marriage was made in secret and her parents knew nothing of it.

The girl in question is Helen Maloney, daughter of Martin Maloney, a multi-millionaire.

One would naturally suppose that this young woman had everything to make a girl happy.

She is young, very good looking, and her parents worship her.

If any of my readers have ever been at Spring Lake, N. J., they will have seen the magnificent country house of the Maloneys.

The house itself is literally a palace, and in the treatment of the grounds landscape gardening has been brought to a science.

It is the sort of home that most girls would find it very easy to be happy in.

Wasted Opportunities

BUT Miss Helen Maloney has apparently been rather a wilful young woman. A friend of mine, who has seen a good deal of her in Rome, where the Maloneys frequently spend the Winter season, describes her as being an attractive but very headstrong girl, who kept her friends constantly on the alert wondering what she would do next. Many men, both Italians and Americans, have been in love with her. She had every opportunity to make a good match, and it is a burning shame that she should have wrecked her life in the manner in which she has.

As a result of her fluid runaway escapade, her mother is a heartbroken woman, her father a broken-down man, and her own good name has received a staggering blow from which it may never recover.

Now it is reported that she is about to re-marry the young man whom she married in secrecy some time ago. The man with whom she is supposed to have eloped seems to have dropped out of the story. But even if she does go back to her husband, what sort of happiness can there ever be between them?

Will not the blot of her elopement with the other man forever stand in the way of their being happy together?

And can she ever regain the notoriety she has brought on her family?

Wounds Family Pride

NO girl has the right to trample on her family's pride as this girl has done.

I hope you will remember that fact, girls, if any of you are contemplating foolish runaway matches.

Remember that you owe a duty to your parents. They have worked for you all your life. If you break their hearts by an unwise marriage, you are showing poor gratitude for their kindness.

Also, you may have younger sisters to think of. You have no right to do anything that will reflect on them and perhaps mar their chances in life.

The younger sister always looks up to the older. If you are headstrong and determined to go against your parents' wishes, the chances are that your little sister will follow suit.

There is no sadder sight than to see the gray heads of old people brought low by wrongdoing of a wilful child.

The parents will forgive, of course, but the hurt is there, and the scar will forever remain.

Simply through wilfulness Miss Maloney has brought on this painful notoriety on her people. It will be years before she, herself, outlives the memory of her foolishness.

Be warned by this, my girls, and whatever happens always be open and above board with your parents.

Don't think of marrying without first consulting them.

EVERY GIRL THINKS THE MAN SHE MARRIES IS HER IDEAL

WHAT WOMAN EXPECTS AND WHAT SHE GETS.

The Girl That Is a Failure in Business

THE girl who expects to begin at the top instead of slowing climbing there.

The girl who makes excuses for herself instead of trying to overcome the difficulty which she tries to evade.

The girl who airs her grievances to others, until she makes a nuisance of herself.

The girl who thinks she is entitled to privileges not granted to her brother.

The girl who is not thorough and conscientious about her work.

The girl who is always doleful.

The girl who spends her nights at parties and arrives at the office the following weary and out of humor.

The girl who expects every one a flirtation or two coincidently with her work.

The girl who tells everyone she doesn't have to work, but is only doing it to make extra pocket money.

The girl who talks over her employer's business outside the office.

The girl who criticises everything and everybody.

The girl who looks upon work as drudgery and has a grudge against fate for forcing her to do it.

The girl who fails to remain womanly and affect mannish airs.

The girl who spends her money upon clothes instead of good, healthful food.

The girl who is never punctual.

The girl who deposits upon favoritism to advance her instead of good honest endeavor.

The girl who constantly "doesn't feel well."

The girl who is indifferent and listless and who takes no interest in her occupation.

The girl who darks courage and self-respect.

The girl who doesn't dress neatly.

HOW TO BE BEAUTIFUL

By the Professor

CLEANSING CREAM

DEAR PROFESSOR:

Some time ago you gave the formula how to obtain cucumber juice. What I want to know is the time used to clean the face with in place of soap, or is it used as the final after bathing the face? You also gave the formula of boiled oatmeal strained and mixed with juice of lemon and a tablespoon of strong, fine olive oil; you tell me if this is used as a skin food after bathing the face? I would like to know what to clean my face with as soap seems to chap my skin so much. CALISTA.

THIS oatmeal lotion is for cleansing the face and the cucumber lotion, while it is also cleansing, is used primarily to soften and whiten the skin. You may also agree with your skin use a cleansing cream of equal parts of almond oil and white orange flower water, added to half the amount of white wax. Rub this into the pores well and then wipe off with a cheesecloth rag. Alcohol is a good cleanser, as is also witch hazel. Simply rub off the face with the cheesecloth which has been wet with either of these liquids.

PIMPLES ON BODY

DEAR PROFESSOR:

I am bothered with pimples on my body from my waist up. I have tried different things, but nothing does any good. GRACE.

COMMON baking soda dissolved in a little water and used for bathing the body will be troubled with the pimples will cure them. Also every night before retiring dab the pimples with peroxide. Of course, it is absolutely important that the linen worn should be changed frequently and that cleanliness prevail which will obtain as well as the right kind of diet.

CLEVER IDEAS FOR WASH DAY

WINTER WASHING—Add a large handful of salt to the rinse water and the clothes will not freeze when hanged out.

Wet the hands well with vinegar when ready to go out to hang clothes. Let it dry on and you will have no cold fingers.

TO CLEAN FABRICS—Grate two large sized potatoes into a pint of water, then strain same through a coarse sieve then another vessel containing a pint of clear water. Let the stand until thoroughly settled. The clear solution is then put on and used to sponge the materials, which are at all afterward washed with clean water, dried and ironed.

TO LAUNDER DELICATE WHITE WAISTS—After washing and drying, apply boiled starch, and hang until very dry. Then ready to iron, dip cloth in cold water and put through a wringer. This prevents their shrinking and they will look sheer and fine.

TO WASH TRIMMED SILK—Do not wring pongee silk. It is better to let drip dry. Iron with moderately hot iron when very dry and do not sprinkle.

"THE TURN OF THE BALANCE"

A Thrilling Story of American Life by Brand Whitlock

CHAPTER XXI.—Continued

"JUST a minute, Elizabeth," he insisted. "I have waited to tell you—that I love you, to ask you to be my wife. I have loved you a long, long time. Don't deny me now—don't decide until you can think—I can wait. Will you think it over calmly for a few days?—will you?"

He tried to look into her face, which she had turned away. Her hands were clasped before her, her figure drawn unusually erect. He heard her sigh. Then with an effort she looked up at him.

"No," she began, "I cannot—"

He stopped her.

"Don't say no," he said. "You have not considered. I am sure. Won't you at least think before deciding definitely?"

She had found more than the usual difficulty there is in saying no to anything, or to any one; now she had strength only to shake her head.

"You must not decide hastily," he insisted.

"I must go in." She turned back toward the house.

"I can wait to know," Eades assured her. They retraced their steps silently. As they went up the walk she said:

"Of course, I am flattered by the honor, Mr. Eades—"

The phrase instantly seemed inadequate, even silly, to her. Why was it one never could be at ease with Eades?

"Don't decide, I beg," he said, "until you have considered the matter carefully. Promise me."

"You must leave me now," she said.

He bowed and stood looking after her as she went up the steps and ran across the veranda in her eagerness to lose her self in the throng within the house. And Eades remained outside, walking under the trees.

Half an hour later Elizabeth stood with Fairfax in the drawing room. Her face was pale: the joy, the spirit that had been in it earlier in the evening had gone from it.

Perplexed

"Ah," said Marriott suddenly, "there goes John Eades. I hadn't seen him before."

Elizabeth glanced hurriedly at Eades and then curiously at Marriott. His face wore the peculiar smile she had seen so often. Now it seemed remote, to belong to other days, days that she had lost.

"He's making a great name for himself just now," said Marriott. "He's bound to win. He'll go to Congress, or be elected Governor or something, sure."

She longed for his opinion and yet just then she felt it impossible to ask it.

"It's a——"

"Bull!" She could not forbear to ask, but she put the question with a little note of challenge that made Marriott turn his head.

"One of those young civilians."

"One of what young civilians?"

"That Emerson writes about."

"He's not so very young, is he?" Elizabeth tried to smile.

"The young civilians are often very old; I fancy Emerson has been disappointed."

He looked at her and was suddenly struck by her pallor and the drawn expression about her eyes. She had met his gaze, and he realized instantly that she had made some mistake. They were standing there in the drawing room, the canvas screen behind them filled with noise and light.

It was the moment when the guests had begun to form the first figures of the Virginia reel, when the laughter had begun to lose its spirit, and the talk its spontaneity, when the older people were beginning to say good night, leaving the younger behind to shower the bride and groom with rice and confetti.

Perplexed, excited, self-conscious after Eades's declaration, feeling a little fear and some secret pride, suddenly Elizabeth saw the old, good-humored, friendly expression fade from Marriott's eyes, and there came a new look, one she had never seen before, an expression of sudden, illumunative intelligence, followed by a shade of pain and regret, perhaps a little reproach.

In Fear

"Where does Emerson say—that?" she asked.

"You look it up and see," he said pressingly.

She left him abruptly, and he stood there, the noise of the revelry in his ears, his hands jangled in his pockets. A moment later he bit his lips, then he turned and dashed up the stairs.

"I'm a fool," he said to himself.

Elizabeth had thought of love, she had imagined it coming to her in some gentle way, but this—somehow, this was not possible. She recalled distinctly every word Eades had spoken, but even more vividly she recalled Marriott's glance.

It meant that he thought she loved Eades. But Marriott understood, that made her weak and impotent in the presence of another? She did not like to own a fear of him, yet she felt a fear of something. The fear crept on her and overwhelmed her; she knew well that he would pursue her, never waver or give up or lose sight of his purpose.

BOOK III.

CHAPTER I.

FOUR miles from town, where a white pike crosses a mud road, is Lute Corners, which is little at this cross-roads to inspire a sane less frivolous, nothing indeed, but a weather-beaten store, where the people of the neighborhood wait for the big yellow trolley cars that sweep across the country hourly, sounding their musical approach a mile away.

Half a mile from the Corners two warranted sisters, Bridget and Margaret Flanagan, live in a weather-beaten cottage in a hovel that was invaded by pigs and chickens and geese.

The two aged women, tall, bony and masculine, lived their graceless, stupid lives, untouched by romance or tragedy, working their few acres and selling their pork and eggs and feathers in the city.

HOW TO APPLY BRAID TRIMMING

NOTHING is prettier and lends more style to a garment than soutache braid, if applied properly. Designs both elaborate and simple may be undertaken with good results if care is exercised in sewing.

Straight bands of contrasting material, with successive rows of soutache braid, are effective and not as difficult nor as tedious as the more elaborate patterns.

Cut the bands from crinoline and then cut strips of the material one inch wider than those of the crinoline. Carefully baste them together, turning the extra half-inch over on either edge, using short, even stitches.

The straight rows of braid may be sewed on by means of a machine, but care should be exercised so as to get them even. However, for elaborate trimming, it is always best to apply the braid by hand in order to keep it from puckering.

Has the Business Woman a Right to Demand Chivalry?

ARE men justified in keeping their seats in crowded cars or trains because women have become their competitors in business?

Would they have erred in this matter of courtesy if women had never entered the business field?

Are business women entitled to the courtesy and chivalry of men, the same as other women?

Do women go into business because men of the family drive them to it?

Does the business man or the business woman carry the heavier burden?

These interesting questions are brought up for discussion in the following letter sent in by a contributor who, not wishing to identify herself in print, asks that her letter be signed "A Woman Worker." Read what she says and see whether you agree with her. Here is the letter:

Part of the Game

I heard a man the other day say it was "part of the game" to let women stand and men sit in crowded vehicles.

That if women wanted to compete in business, she had to take the same chances and bear the same burdens that men do.

Women are willing and able to do it. Women in all ages and in all civilizations has been found willing to "take her medicine" far more bravely and uncomplainingly than man. But,

Why do women go into business?

In almost every instance the men of the family haven't supplied them with enough—either haven't been able to earn enough, or are stingy. And rather than live in poverty, or receive pride by constantly begging for money, women have become earners of money.

Woman's Double Work

Eight women out of every ten who are in business also work at household tasks in the evening. In the early morning and Sundays, sometimes for themselves alone, more often helping mothers and sisters to cook and clean, many times for men in the family, who sit around and read the papers, or walk out and loaf around. And these very men are the first way to town refuse to give these women—these double workers—money.

Because they're in business women don't do less but more work. Both servants and money are scarce, and the business woman must do her own household tasks.

Many of the women who work are wives and mothers, have borne children and still work bear them, and wait on the men of their household.

Man's custom that getting, women stand is a "part of the game" in the shallowest reasoning and the ugliest selfishness.

A WOMAN WORKER.

The topics discussed in this letter are of vital interest to men as well as women.

Every girl and every man who works has convictions on this subject.

Now is your chance to say what you think.

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

By Beatrice Fairfax

A RIGHT TO OBJECT

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am keeping company with a young lady and intend very soon to announce our engagement. Some time ago she made the acquaintance of a young man whose folks were friends of her family. This young man paid her considerable attention. They were out driving on numerous times. She told me of having met him and of those occasional drives. I asked her whether she did it. She said that she had no old friend of the family. Consequently I never met him before. And that she just did it for pleasure, but was very sorry I did not like it and would never do so again. But I understand they are still keeping a "post card" correspondence and I do not like it. Have I any reason to feel so, or not? A. W.

YES. If you object to the correspondence, as you say you do, though there is probably no harm in it. Tell her that it makes you unhappy, and I am sure that she will give it up. The very fact of her telling you all about going out with the young man shows that her interest in him is merely friendly.

RUNNING A RISK

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young man twenty-four years of age and keeping company with a young lady who is willing to help me establish a business if I should get engaged to her, and wishes some to take place shortly. Although I think I can make a success at same with the experience that I have, still I dislike to accept the offer, as I am of a very independent nature and would rather walk until I could start with my own capital, and this looks to be a long way off. L. S.

I THINK that you would be running a great risk in accepting a woman's savings to start in business. If you were married to her it would be a different thing.

FITZGERALD CAN BE BEATEN, BUT HIBBARD CANNOT DO IT

—Rev. Herbert S. Johnson

PASTOR ALL BUT NAMES COULTHURST

In Forceful Sermon Warren Avenue Preacher Describes Ideal Candidate.

"MACHINE" MUST BE ROUTED

"I am certain that the present Mayor of Boston can be beaten at the coming election."

"Why should the Republicans of this city consider nominating the Republican nominee in this campaign? It is absolutely impossible to elect him."

"The result of the election (Mc-Cready victory) was a surprise and brought about by the Republican party. It was also the party's own independent voters in both parties who were disgusted with John F. Fitzgerald."

Politicians and other citizens who have sought to take an insight into the welfare of the municipality may to-day discussing the sermon of Rev. Herbert S. Johnson, pastor of the Warren Avenue Baptist Church, who, last evening, in one of his characteristic sermons, used the language quoted above.

The clergyman then went on to describe the kind of man who in his opinion could be elected Mayor of Boston this Fall. Many of those who heard the clergyman realized that his description of John A. Coulthurst, candidate for the Independence League nomination, and were led to believe that Mr. Johnson had him in mind.

This is Mr. Johnson's description of the man who, he says, can be elected:

Candidate Sure of Victory.

"The only man, in my opinion, who can bring out the forces that are necessary to beat Mr. Fitzgerald must be a man who can appeal powerfully to the Irish-American vote, to the Roman Catholic vote, to the Jewish vote and to the best men of the Republican party, and in my opinion the only man who can do that must be—and he should be because this is a Roman Catholic city, and Irish-American city and overwhelmingly Democratic city—that man should be the best Irish-American, Roman Catholic Democrat that can be found, and I a man who generally votes the Republican ticket, would be proud and happy if the Republicans would nominate such a man as I have suggested."

In his sermon Rev. Mr. Johnson further said:

"I am certain that the present Mayor of Boston can be beaten at the coming election. While the people were watching the returns in Newspaper row on Tuesday evening Mr. Fitzgerald's picture was suddenly thrown on the canvas. Immediately it was hissed by hundreds of people along the street. I took particular pains to notice who the men were that did the hissing. They were mostly laboring men with pipes in their mouths.

Tide Against Fitzgerald.

"I noticed also that they were the same men who cheered the photograph of John F. Moran. This morning the man who blackened my shoes, a foreigner, but recently naturalized, told me that he and nine other members of his family had determined to vote against Mr. Fitzgerald.

"Within a week I have seen an Irishman who is a Democrat almost overcome with emotion and indignation as he spoke of the disgrace to his own people of the 'worst administration Boston has ever known.'

"I am certain that the deepest feeling which exists to-day against the Mayor's re-election is that of the Irish-Americans who love good government, and there are many thousands of them who will vote against the present incumbent.

"Two of the leading Democratic politicians of Boston, who have been noted for their shrewdness in reading the signs of political times in the past, have both declared privately to friends of mine within forty-eight hours that the present Mayor cannot be re-elected.

Must Unite Moran Forces.

"Those who best understand the secret of John B. Moran's amazing majority are completely satisfied that the same forces that conspired to produce it will be found aligned against the Mayor on December 10.

"I wish to say, however, with all possible emphasis, that my opposition to Mr. Fitzgerald can be beaten depends solely upon the condition that there shall be nominated against him a proper candidate who can unite all the forces of religion and good government at the polls.

"This man, in my opinion, should be, and must be, an Irishman, and of all be a Democrat, no matter what. Those who think that the Republican party won a great victory at last Tuesday's election will soon find themselves terribly disillusioned if they proceed upon that assumption. The result of the election was certainly not brought about by the Republican party. It was due solely to the independent voters in both parties who were disgusted with John F. Fitzgerald. Mr. Lincoln and Mr. Webster failed to make even a creditable showing in the Democratic precincts of the city which were typical of the present Mayor.

"Mr. Whitney himself, according to the newspapers, attributes his defeat to the fact that Mr. Fitzgerald was invited to the platform at the Democratic rally in Symphony Hall.

"Mr. Dolan's narrow escape from defeat was due solely to the fact that his excellent reputation mitigated the offense of his intimate relations with the Mayor.

Defeat for Machine Man.

"If the Republican party, proceeding upon the assumption that it has won a victory at the last election, shall now nominate a machine candidate for the office of postmaster of Boston, it will see him overwhelmingly defeated. Such a man at the present time cannot even receive the support of independent voters in the party who generally follow Republican leadership.

"We would work against the Republican candidate as a result of the machine which has attempted to make capital for its own selfish ends out of a spontaneous uprising of the people, for the sake of righteousness and decency in city government.

"If the Republican party in Boston wishes to do now the thing which it should have done at the time of its nomination to the best Irish Catholic Democrat who could be found and the duty. Such a man could be found in a minute, and will forever put a curtain upon the political aspirations of John F. Fitzgerald."

Coulthurst Measures Up to Ideal Set by Dr. Johnson for Mayoralty

From the Rev. Herbert S. Johnson's description of mayoralty candidate who can beat Fitzgerald:

HE must be a man who can appeal powerfully to the Irish-American vote.

He must be a man who can appeal to the Roman Catholic vote.

He should be a Democrat.

He should be the best man of this kind that can be found.

Mr. Courthurst is a Catholic and graduated from Boston College with the degree of B. A.

NEW ENGLAND TRAINMEN PLAN WAGE INCREASE

A Raise of Ten Per Cent. Will Probably Be Asked of the Railroads.

WORCESTER, Nov. 11.—The opinion of the trainmen and conductors on the New York Central, New York, New Haven & Hartford and Boston & Maine systems throughout New England is being presented to the management of these roads by the Eastern Association of Trainmen and Conductors.

F. H. Baker, representing this organization, is in Worcester to-day on his tour of the New England States putting the question to the railroad employes, and for the next two weeks will extend his inquiries to other points on the three systems.

Mr. Baker was sent out as the result of the meeting of the association held in New York two weeks ago, when the officers decided to make an effort to have the eastern railroads meet the 10 per cent. increase granted the conductors and trainmen of the middle West. It is probable that an equal raise will be asked in New England.

NEWVORENBERG STORE OPENS

The trend of the smart shopping interests toward the Back Bay is again illustrated in the opening to-day of Vezenberg's duplicate novelty store at No. 832 Boylston street.

This is called a "duplicate" store because it is a replica in goods, values and bargains, of the Vezenberg novelty store at No. 13 Winter street, the original shopping centre of the town.

The Boylston street store drew a rush of patrons to-day, who expressed much praise of the new establishment, its fittings and its offerings.

PEACE BOARD MEETS TO-DAY

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—The commission having in charge the industrial peace foundation, to which President Roosevelt donated the Nobel prize, arrives here to-day to map out the scope of the work to be done and to stimulate, if possible, further donations in order to bring the fund up to $1,000,000. STATE HAS NO RIGHT TO KILL, SAYS VAHEY

Senator Declares Death Penalty Not Deterring to Criminals.

In an address on "The Abolition of Capital Punishment," delivered before several hundred members of the Columbus Club of Dorchester, Senator Jesse M. Vahey yesterday afternoon declared that the day would come when there would be no more executions in Massachusetts.

Mr. Vahey's strong opposition to the death penalty has especial significance in the fact that he was senior counsel for Charles L. Tucker, executed for the killing of Mabel Page, who went to the electric chair asserting his innocence. Mr. Vahey made no allusion to this case. He said in part:

"The prejudice against a change in the law, which now permits the punishment by death, arises from a variety of reasons. One is lack of information on the subject, another is the old theory that capital punishment is Bible inspired, and a third is an unreasoning fear that the abolition of the death penalty will increase the crime of murder.

"I am one of those who believe that the Commonwealth has no right to take life. The only practical way in which the death penalty can now be discussed is its value as a deterring influence upon those who are criminally inclined and might otherwise refrain from committing the crime of murder. Does not every criminal believe that he will escape the consequences of the law in the case that they are?

"I am very glad that the Senate of Massachusetts has passed a law, for the first time in its history, which permits a jury to discharge its duty and satisfy their conscience, and at the same time be merciful to a man who would otherwise suffer the punishment of death."

'I WILL STICK,' SAYS HIBBARD

Charging that the stories that he will withdraw if nominated in the Republican primary for Mayor, in favor of some other candidate, emanate from City Hall for the purpose of injuring his candidacy, Postmaster George A. Hibbard has issued a public statement refuting the charges. Mr. Hibbard says:

"In refutation of the many rumors which have been given circulation within the past few days to the effect that I would withdraw in favor of some other man if I am nominated for Mayor, I desire to say that such stories are false, and are circulated with the malicious intention of defeating me in the Republican primaries on Thursday next.

"The stories that I will withdraw are but another scheme emanating from City Hall for the purpose of injuring my candidacy. Not only will I not withdraw, but I am fully convinced that I shall be nominated at the primaries on Thursday next, and on December 10 shall be elected as the next Mayor of Boston."

Finance Commission---Concrete Engineers

What do you think of this: "Expert" H. F. Eddy, employed by the Finance Commission at an enormous price, has his answers to Sughrue's questions typewritten, beforehand, and when put on the witness stand by Sughrue, "Expert" Eddy answers from his typewritten sheet the answer to question No. 1, 2, etc.

When questioned by the "deaf and dumb" method which the Finance Commission insisted upon our counsel using, he didn't have his answers typewritten, and the following seemingly astounding ignorance of fundamental principles of reinforced concrete was the result:

Q.—In figuring the stresses in the concrete and steel in reinforced concrete, what method do you employ?

A.—For the limit of tensile stress I should use 12,000 pounds to the square inch; sometimes 15,000 or 16,000 pounds is used; and in figuring compressive stress I should use 500 pounds. It depends on the structure.

Note to those who are not engineers—This answer seemingly shows absolute ignorance of a fundamental principle.

Q.—What do you consider to be the necessary percentage of steel to prevent cracks in concrete due to temperature?

A.—I have not figured the amount of steel required for that, and I should not care to express an opinion.

Note—In other words, he did not know.

Q.—What is the chief difference in effect on design, of the straight line and parabolic theories, with references to reinforced concrete?

A.—I don't think I care to express an opinion on that at the present time.

Q.—Have you any opinion?

A.—No, not at the present time.

Q.—Do you understand it? Does it convey any idea to you?

A.—I don't understand just what he means.

Q. (by the chairman)—Have you answered these questions as FULLY as you can?

A.—Yes, sir.

These are all fair questions on fundamental principles of reinforced concrete.

This so-called "expert" on reinforced concrete walls until last April was Superintendent of SEWERS in the city of Worcester, where he now resides. Wasn't there in all Boston a real, honest concrete engineer that the Finance Commission could employ?

CALL OUT THE MAINE GUARDS IN MAN HUNT

Business Practically Suspended in Houlton in Search for Lost Hunter.

BANGOR, Me., Nov. 11.—Business in the little town of Houlton is practically suspended to-day, the majority of the men and boys having taken up the search for Robert Lovely, who has been missing since Friday and who, it is feared, has either starved to death or has lost his life in many of the swamps which are found in the dense woods near here.

More than 300 men carried on the hunt yesterday and last night and in addition to the regular villagers, Company L of the Maine National Guards were rallied out and they also scoured the woods without success.

Lovely started out on a hunting expedition with several companions on Friday, but in some way separated from them and while they hunted around until darkness overtook them, they could find no trace of the missing man.

They returned to town and reported his absence and the townspeople quickly organized a hunting party and started to scour the woods. They kept up the hunt all day Saturday, and yesterday a number of the women took a hand in the search.

It is hoped that the guards, by firing their rifles, will be able to get some answer to the report from the missing huntsman, but the majority of the men are of the opinion that if Lovely is still alive he is so weak that he would be unable to even lift his gun.

The woods where Lovely is supposed to be are very dense and are filled with deep and dangerous swamps, which are hidden by shrubs, and it is thought that he fell into one of these while groping his way around in the dark and was unable to free himself and has been drowned.

The search will be kept up until he is found, either dead or alive.

VOTE OF LEAGUE TOWERS ABOVE DEMOCRAT TOTAL

INDEPENDENTS FIRMLY ENTRENCHED AS SECOND PARTY IN STATE.

One hundred and twenty-five cities and towns, with Boston yet to be heard from, report a Democratic vote last Wednesday of 35,528, and an Independence League vote of 40,208, bearing out the contention of Leaguers that the Hisgen total of 75,258 was probably 5,000 votes over the Democratic total and that the Independence League, therefore, is now one of the "two leading political parties."

If the League vote topped the Democratic vote Leaguers will be entitled to one-half of the election offices in Massachusetts, the law provides that

"Such election officers shall be so appointed as equally to represent the two leading political parties."

Some of the leading Democrats who had charge of the recent disastrous Whitney campaign suggest that the recent election in Wellesley, some years ago, which, they say, will eventually give the Democratic party full credit for the votes cast for Mr. Whitney as Democrat, Citizens' and "Citizens' Independent" candidate.

May Take in Bartlett Vote.

These side-line votes, they say, were factional Democratic votes, but never-the-less, Democratic.

Democratic suggests that the Bartlett vote, 11,710, was decidedly a "Democratic vote" and that the Democratic campaign managers will urge that the Bartlett vote be added to the 84,192 that went to Whitney under his various designations.

In addition to the 101 cities and towns previously reported, the AMERICAN to-day submits these further reports:

LIFE GUARDS SAVE CREW AT CHATHAM

CHATHAM, Nov. 11.—The lumber-laden barkentine E. R. Smith, bound from Port Johnson, N. S., to Portland, Me., went ashore on Bushey Shoal, off Chatham. The captain and crew of the ship were taken off by Captain Sherley of the Chatham Life Guards.

SHILOHITES LEFT BEHIND ARE DESTITUTE

The Yacht "Kingdom" Took All the Supplies From the Colony and $2,000.

PORTLAND, Me., Nov. 11.—Left in desperate straits by the sailing of the barkentine Kingdom, on which were loaded all the supplies available, the little colony of Holy Ghosters left at Shiloh have had their cup of bitterness filled to overflowing by the discovery that the Kingdom will not go to the Holy Land to meet the prophet, "Elijah," Rev. Frank Sandford, and to help establish the half built colony at Palestine, but instead will take Sandford on board at San Salvador and then make an indefinite cruise, leaving them successes perhaps for good.

After the Kingdom left, loaded with enough supplies for a year's cruise, it was found that $2,000, the entire available cash of the colony, had been taken.

It is intimated by Sandford's local attorney that "Moses," Charles E. Holland will meet Sandford in the Bahamas, taking a time-killing cruise around the world, because "Moses" fears to return to this country at present.

It is said they who escaped from Shiloh yesterday says there is nothing to eat in the colony but salt and potatoes.

Preach, pray and sacrifice, sobs, and indignant citizens will again try legal steps to effect their release.

Eleven veterans of the bike track will line up at 1 o'clock to-day at the Park Square Rink Coliseum Oval to begin the six-day grind which will not be concluded till 11 o'clock next Saturday night.

There are eleven teams of two competing, and the riding time is ten hours a day, beginning at 1 o'clock and lasting till 11 at night.

The field includes the leading riders from every section of the country, while several foreign countries are also represented, giving an international flavor to the race.

The race itself, which will last ten hours each day, will be a speed killer, as the men will go to the limit of their riding capabilities when the starting gnnis sends them away each noon. The event promises sensational stages, as there will be a continual spurt in order to steal laps, which will demand hurry calls be made for relief on members of every team.

Patsy Logan Hurt.

There has been only one change in the original list of teams, and that is in the case of the Boston pair, Root and Logan. Logan was injured so severely in the opening night of the track that he will be forced to drop out, and Walter Bargette of Buffalo will team up with Root. He is a plugger, and should make an able partner for the blonde-haired champion of three six-day races.

There is considerable feeling between members of the different teams, and some hot blood will be developed during the week, which will be displayed in some terrific scraps on the track.

Both Fogler and Moran of the vets' team have it in for Eddie Root, as all the teams have for that matter, because of Root's prestige, but in the case of Fogler, who has ridden with Root the last two years and was turned down this year, he will ride his head off to beat his old partner. Root is a wonderful sprinter, and Fogler claims to be his master and has a good chance to prove it in this race. Moran, too, considers himself as good as any man living when it comes to hitting the pace up.

The MacLean-Krebs team will bear a lot of watching. Krebs took a fall out of Fogler last Saturday night when he beat him in the mile open, but it is a wonderful burst of speed, while the local boy is known for his ability to hold his own in endurance tests.

The Italian team has come on with intentions of being at the top of the list when the final bell rings, as they have brought along a number of wheels built to order for speed.

The United States talk, but are well versed in how to make a wheel jump.

Will Be Gruelling Pace.

Every one of the twenty-two riders is anxious to get in near the top and realize that they are in for a gruelling race from the start, and will need all the speed they can muster, as there won't be any chance for anybody without the necessary kick in the pedals.

The cycling game has got a hold on the Hub, and it is the only place in the country which can boast of a permanent indoor track and also the fastest in the world.

The fight will begin at the start it is expected with the intention of killing off the slow riders if possible, as there will be small chance for any who cannot hang to the pacemakers.

The mileage each day will accumulate and five minutes before the end of the day's ride a bell will announce the time and the teams must make their last change. It is then that the race will be on deck, as it will be no use of a partner calling for rid if a spell is started.

Then when the last mile is started, a gun will announce it to the riders, and there will be something done to the late laps to lead the field in.

KEENE TRAINER GETS $55,000

Although the salary paid by James H. Keene to James Rowe as trainer is necessarily known to only the two persons most concerned, it is matter of common gossip that it is not less than $12,000 annually, and this, added to the usual 10 per cent. of gross winnings, makes Rowe's earnings this year at least $52,000.

Besides this, there has usually been an arrangement that a percentage of the money realized by the sale of horses in training also is included in the trainer's compensation. This would add about $5,000 more, so that the trainer earns more than is paid to the President of the United States.

DARTMOUTH WILL BE IN FINE SHAPE

HANOVER, N. H., Nov. 11.—The work this week of the Dartmouth eleven will be the hardest of the year, for the coaches will drive the team hard, remedying such mistakes as crop out, and will develop a few new puzzling plays for the Harvard game.

Coach Dr. O'Connor has brought the team through a successful season so far and every effort will now be applied to turn out a victory over the Crimson.

Dr. Bowler has got the men into the best possible physical condition, and as none of them received serious injuries in the game on Saturday they should enter the Stadium, barring accidents in practice, in the pink of condition.

There's a feeling of confidence here that Harvard will suffer another defeat.

Is Former Boilermaker Getting Ready to Fight Again

JEFF TRAINING ON QUIET

BY TAD.

"Jeffries is training two hours every day in a little gymnasium out there in Los Angeles," said Mr. Hen Berry, the baseball man from the southern town.

Mr. Berry was in New York recently at the big baseball powwow, and when he read that Burns's manager had said that Jeffries was designing to come right up "in the air like a rocket."

Mr. Berry then said Mr. Berry patting a very modest cheek and olive green vest, "Jeff is not doing himself a bit of harm. He takes a drink now and then with the boys in his place, but, as the boys say, he's working every day out there with the bag and skipping rope.

"No, I can't say that he expects a fight, but you know any time a man straps and buttons a racket he isn't going to get it away and stop shaving himself.

Jeff Will Be Ready.

"I have an idea that the big fellow is trying to get himself fit for a call, and if he does get it wants to be there ready to get down to hard work.

"I don't believe that he would, as Burns's manager says, drink so that he couldn't tell a hat from a plate of stew. That's a bit of exaggeration to make people believe that Burns is the biggest man in the world.

"Burns is too cheap himself to go in a place to buy drink, so I don't see where he comes in to say anything about Jeff."

Mr. Berry then pulled a pink and lavender silk, wiped his fevered brow and twisted.

Coming right from the southern town, where he takes a hand in a few things, and when he says that Jeff is doing a bit of work he rather tips off the hand of the big fellow.

Three years ago, when Jeff was training for the Monroe fight at Harbin Springs, he stated that whenever he found himself unfit for a tough course of training he would quit the ring.

"I know that I am as good as any fighter in the world," said Jeff at that time, "and if my condition is as good as the other fellow's I will always win. If I can't train properly for a fight I won't fight."

Jeff Three to One Favorite.

Jeff was a three to one favorite over the Butte miner, but he worked as hard for that go as he did for the Fitzsimmons fight here, and that's going a few.

Mr. Berry says that the big fellow is trying himself out daily now. Wonder if he smells a rat? Wonder if Jim Coffroth's offer has bothered him any? Looks as though the Johnson person might draw a bit of money with him, and as the old bit is what we all love, the big fellow might come back.

What an insignificant thing this gentleman Burns would be if Jeff and Johnson should hook up.

The latter was never better in his life than he is right now, and as Jeff has been out of the game for some time, betting on the affair would be brisk. Not to be considered and heavy, even though the expert from the conservatory doesn't see it.

SAYS HARVARD ISN'T IN IT WITH YALE

PROVIDENCE, Nov. 11.—According to Captain Pryor of the Brown eleven, Yale will be the whole thing in the game with Harvard on November 23. He says:

"Harvard has neither the versatility nor the force of the Yale attack, and when we played them they had only one play with which they could gain. Yale has strong backs, very strong backs, and her running game is excellent. Yale also has a fine offence, and Harvard, on her part, couldn't withstand them.

"Burr will outpunt Coy if the Yale kicker wins at his best to-day (he wasn't). We went to New Haven thinking Coy was a world-beater, but Burr's kicks traveled farther and had better direction. The formation to protect the kicks fooled them but we bent them on straight football.

"Pennsylvania has a better line than Harvard and Princeton. Brown's team, Harvard has a number of good plays. I believe that if Harvard plays to her full strength in the Yale game she will make the bull dog hustle to win."

MANUEL TO MEET ROGERS.

The following is the standing in the three-cushion tournament at the Hub Billiard Rooms: A. G. Cutler won first place and Jimmy Ryan second. Ben Laurie, Pete Rogers and Harry Mannel are in a tie for third place. Mannel and Rogers will play their tie game to-night.

LOCAL FIGHT FANS WILL SEE MANY GOOD BOUTS

No better card has been decided locally than the one which is scheduled for decision at the Cooper Club to-night when the rejuvenated Hebrew champion, Kid Goodman, faces "Cyclone" Johnny Thompson, the rosy-cheeked lightweight champion of Illinois.

The record that Goodwin has achieved in the West, where he stopped the victorious career of "Packie" McFarland, and showed all that he was once again boxing in his old-time form.

"Cyclone" Thompson is a white boy who has been one of the toughest propositions for the past few years. He has had 170 battles in the arena and in all that time he has only been knocked down once.

Cyclone's Good Record.

He has never been knocked out, and in his career he has fought such men as Battling Nelson, Dick Hyland, George Memsic, Kid Carter, Adam Ryan and a host of others too numerous to mention.

Both Thompson and Goodwin are the same style in the ring, rushing all the time and this insures a fast, steady fight for the Cooper Club members.

Besides the semi-final there will be the main bout, Young Chisholm of Everett faces Jackie Williams of Cambridge, and Young Sullivan of Roxbury boxes Jimmy Sullivan of the South End.

Membership applications for the Cooper Club can be secured of Secretary John J. Morrissey, 28 Bromfield street, Room 19.

Tommy Quill of Brockton has the chance of his life ahead of him to-morrow night when he faces Dick Nelson, the fighting Dane, in Chelsea. The Dane has distinguished himself here and the fans all say that he is invincible in his class. He certainly proved with Kouse O'Brien the other night that he can box at any style and take pretty good care of himself.

The preliminaries should be interesting, for two good teams appear. Mike Conroy and Eddie Curtis, a clever pair of bantams, and Billy Gregg of St. Louis and the Dutch Carr of Charlestown, welters, furnish the amusement in the other bouts, while a heavyweight competition will precede these events.

PRINCIPAL BOUTS CARDED THIS WEEK

TIGER KICKER WORRIES YALE COACHES

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 11.—There's just one man who is bothering Yale's coaches now, and that is Harlan, Princeton's drop kicker, who did such fine work against Amherst Saturday. Unless Wheaton recovers rapidly the Elis will be without a man who can cope with the clever Tiger.

All Yale is delighted at the showing made against Brown, and another championship as well as a season without the Yale goal being crossed is predicted. A favorite bet which Yale men are offering is that Yale will win both the matches with Harvard and Princeton, the former taking the short end of a 1 to 2 wager, and Princeton a shade.

The scramable for tickets for both the Princeton game here and for the Harvard game in Cambridge is terrific, and seats for each are bringing $10 each.

The makeup of the team against Princeton Saturday will probably be the same as in the Brown game.

Frank Hinkey will remain here till after the Brown game.

All practices will be in secret this week.

SLAGLE MAY BE A DOVE

CHICAGO, Nov. 11.—The persistent rumor comes that Jimmy Slagle will wear a Boston National uniform in 1908. George D. Dovey, of the Chicago baseball team, after the rabbit for some time, and it is said they off as a result, ranking thirteenth with the distance flag a little too far, Charley Murphy.

Slagle is just the man Dovey thinks necessary to give his team the semblance of a winner. Just what Dovey will have to offer Slagle is not yet announced, but it is a cinch that Murphy will not be the only means that is, if he can help himself.

Slagle finished fifth in batting averages of the National League, just issued, Slagle fell to .961.

HARVARD SWIMMING DATES

TIGERS' BACKS WILL BOTHER YALE ENDS

Captain Price of the Washington and Jefferson team has this to say on Yale and Princeton: "The two teams, as they appeared to me in the games I played against them, are in an almost balance of strength and ability, with the scale tipped, if at all, slightly toward Yale. Princeton beat us 40 to 0 and Yale beat us 11 to 0, but no comparison can be made from that fact, as on day at Princeton made us easy for them. Yale, who would not have won by any such score if we played against them as we did against Princeton.

"I think the slippery field at New Haven was a big factor in the Yale win, and I think there is superiority in the Yale line that will be a big factor in the Princeton game. From tackle to tackle Yale's line is strong enough to go through Princeton, and the Yale defence is the strongest I have met this year. James, our left guard, who coached McGregg at Princeton, thinks Goebel the strongest man he has played against. Yale will find it very difficult to gain by end runs, while the fast and tricky Princeton backs and their perfect interference will present a problem that the Yale ends will find hard to solve."

HARNESS HORSE NOTES.

Jed Bradbury of Brockton has sold to Thomas H. Hunt, Pompus Isle, Mich., The Marshal, by Marshal, out of a mare by King Wilkes. He will be raced next season.

It is said that many secretaries of fair and racing associations are compelled to promise the owners and drivers of horses that no driver shall be suspended in any during a race, records of the horses entered to be the only order to go by. This will do away with all their excuses. This is bad for the future of the sport, and owners and drivers ought to know that by so doing they are only killing their own game.

Eddie Bliss has John M. (2:02¾), and Joe Pyland (2:03¾), at Cobb's stable in Chelsea, for the winter. The latter is coming out well. He may be raced at Syracuse last Summer in a work to wagon, and if he can be will be given a record to race another year.

The pacing mare Princess Helen (2:08¾) is now being used on the New York Speedway by her owner, James McClenahan.

JIMMY BRIGGS WILL HAVE BUSY WEEK

Two arduous tasks are ahead of Jimmy Briggs, the lightweight boxer, for the coming week. The Chelsea boxer is training as he did when he cleaned up Dave Deshler and knocked that lad's championship aspirations into the air.

Thursday night at Dover, N. H., Briggs will oppose Dick Nelson, the fighting Dane. As the Dane is one of the toughest of the newcomers it is patent that Briggs must be in good shape, as he would not undertake a tough contract of that kind unless in the best of condition. The next night Briggs will jump to Augusta, Me., and there attempt to clean up that Maine wonder, Kid Rhea. The latter is confident that he has it on Briggs and will surely defeat him.

YANKEE ROGERS IN TOWN.

Yankee Rogers, the famous American heavyweight mat artist, who wrestles at the Columbia Theatre tomorrow night, arrived in town this morning. He is in the best of trim and feels confident that he can defeat the mighty Samson, the man who put up such a game battle against Steurs Last Winter.

HUB BOOKIES' MEAL TICKET STILL A FAITHFUL ALLY

Do you ever hear of Corn Price, the bookmaker's ally? If not, it is a bet that you know nothing about the pouies, and your knowledge with the Hub bookies and handbook men is very limited.

Corn Price is a three-year-old thoroughbred filly that a Boston man is racing over the running tracks around New York. She is widely known, especially by Boston sports as the famous "Meal Ticket."

Though her name had been among the starters in the entry blanks, she also runs—get her real debut to fame came on election day, when it be like a flash to get "aboard" on Corn Price for all the money that could be invested on her.

It was one of those safe investments wherein the wide, wide world was permitted, as a personal privilege, to get in on the ground floor.

Not Tipped, But Spilled.

Tipped! Well did you ever. She was more than tipped; she was spilled over. So were the Boston sports who backed her heavily, only to learn that she finished absolutely—last.

But one good turn deserves another, or something of that kind. Corn was out again in the opening dash at Aqueduct Saturday in a six and one-half furlong race. Regularly on time came the letter from the owner to have his friends get aboard at any cost. It was the one chance to get even for the maxims fluttered away on election day.

To make it stronger the tip came that Corn was in bad shape. The race was for a mile, and at six furlongs she was in the lead, but getting jumped against the fence with the distance flag a little too far, from the filly's downfall. Since last Tuesday she had worked a midnight trial of six furlongs in 1:12 2-5, fast enough to make the other entries in Saturday's event look like dray horses, once the flag fell.

Corn In Bad Again.

Well, Corn might have been in bad in her election day race, but after she finished a cheerful sixth in Saturday's speed contest of the Boston sports were in doubly bad.

Say Corn Price to any except a partisan fan friend, and you are in danger of having a lot of trouble to attend to immediately. It is like waving a red flag in a bull's face. This narrative is solely a danger warning, not a show up of the Hub's gamedope players.

The bookies and handbook men! Well, you know it is music to the gambler's ear to hear the jingle of gold.

CORNELL TEAM WELCOMED.

ITHACA, N. Y., Nov. 11.—Eight hundred Cornell students welcomed home the football team which defeated West Point Saturday. A triumphal float drawn by singing and cheering undergraduates bore the players and coaches up State street to the Ithaca Hotel. Captain George T. Cook, Field Coach C. A. Luder and Trainer John F. Moakley responded to calls for speeches.

HARVARD'S CHANCES ARE POOR

COLLEGE GAMES SATURDAY.

Harvard vs. Dartmouth, at Cambridge.
Yale vs. Princeton, at New Haven.
West Point vs. Michigan, at Ann Arbor, Mich.
West Point vs. Tufts, at West Point.
Cornell vs. Pennsylvania, at Ithaca.
Brown vs. Vermont, at Providence.
Amherst vs. Penn State, at Annapolis.
Williams vs. Amherst, at Williamstown.
Holy Cross vs. Villa Nova, at Worcester.
Carlisle vs. Minnesota, at Minneapolis.
Bowdoin vs. Maine, at Brunswick.
Springfield Y. M. C. A. vs. Massachusetts Aggies at Springfield.
Lafayette vs. Syracuse, at Syracuse.

Head Coach Crane and his assistants over in the Stadium will start to-day trying to solve the great gridiron mystery, "What's the matter with Harvard?" They hope to give the correct answer before the Crimson eleven lines up against Dartmouth on Saturday. It will, however, take a lot of brain work to work out the problem.

All the Crimson kickers are in good shape except Kennard, who will be out of the game the rest of the season. It is feared a bone has been broken in his ankle.

This afternoon there will be little doing except thinking, but to-morrow all will get down to hard work.

Wendell's eligibility case will be decided by the faculty to-morrow.

Dave Campbell Coming.

Perhaps Dave Campbell, one of Harvard's famous captains, who will be here this week, can do something with the eleven. They need a hard driver.

The game at the Stadium on Saturday was a revelation of Harvard's weaknesses. In fairness to Harvard it will not do to mix matters. Harvard has the material and no one knows that better than the Harvard undergraduates. Many of them are veterans with all the experience that is necessary to transform them into champion-ship material. Any opponent who have had the services of first-class coachers, but they don't play good football.

Coach Warner's Criticism.

Here is what Coach Glenn Warner of the Indians said about the Crimson team.

"Harvard attack and defence at times was brilliant, but at times it was crude. The Crimson team however showed that it has latent strength and that properly developed it can develop into a fighting machine that will challenge the strength and keenness of any team in the East.

Captain Lubo of the Indians said:

"Harvard has a splendid team, but needs to get together. Her line looks good, the line is strong, but there is no unison in her attack of any kind. Her kicks fooled them but we bent them on straight football.

"Pennsylvania has a better line than Harvard and Princeton. Brown's team, Harvard has a number of good plays. I believe that if Harvard plays to her full strength in the Yale game she will make the bull dog hustle to win."

MILLS CLOSE, MANY ARE IDLE

DEDHAM, Nov. 11.—As a result of the closing down of the finishing rooms at the Merchants Woolen Mills and the consequent loss of employment to nearly 300 people, a majority of the operatives of last Dedham are out of employment and the prospects ahead are anything but bright. The closing of the finishing room at the Merchants mills followed logically the closing of the other departments, and to due, the owners claim, to lack of orders.

The closing is ostensibly for but six weeks. Some workmen have secured employment elsewhere, but the majority are unprepared for the Winter season.

NEWS OF LABOR.

The BOSTON AMERICAN having been selected the medium of publicity of the Federation of State, City and Town Employees' Union, this column will contain all the official news of that body, which is destined to be the most active and, in point of numbers, the most effective union in the State.

The following resolutions were adopted:

First, a pension for State, City and Town employes who are aged or infirm.

Second, an eight-hour employment of the eight-hour law, which it is claimed is being violated in many cities and towns.

Third, a general wage scale of $2.25 day for laborers and a general Saturday half-holiday the year round.

Fifth, pay for all legal holidays.

Sixth, civil service rules in all cities and towns.

Seventh, the sending of organizers into cities and towns in the United States to form locals.

Eighth, appointment of a legislative committee.

Ninth, the federation and all affiliated unions should politically stand by their friends and try to defeat the enemies of organized labor.

Tenth, a censure for the Brockton city government for not employing all citizen labor instead of cheap alien labor.

Eleventh, commendation of the Tri-American method of employing city labor in Medford.

Thirteenth, the endorsement of James P. Timilty, president of the State Employes' Boston District Council, for alderman.

Fourteenth, the endorsement of the BOSTON AMERICAN as the official organ.

The next quarterly convention is Brockton. The treasurer reported the finances to be in a healthy condition.

President O'Brien stated, before leaving for the national convention, at Fall River, Norfolk, Va., that the convention of the State, city and town employes unions was the most successful ever held, and that the convention cordially agrees to have a union in every city and town this side of the Rocky Mountains in a very short time.

The Wealth That Is Never Used

But Little of It Is in Stocks or Bonds or Money

The average man, seeking some excuse for unhappiness, feels deeply grieved because many rich men do not use their wealth.

He thinks bitterly of great piles of gold and stocks and bonds stored away where they do nobody any good, and reflects that he could use them very much more wisely if only somebody would permit him to.

Just now it is rather fortunate for this country that there are piles of dollars and securities in the banks.

Although some of them may not be used, the fact that they are THERE prevents bank depositors from becoming frightened. Tons of gold are coming from Europe on the great steamships; a little of it for use; the rest to reassure the public—to restore confidence as the expression is.

The man who continually complains about other men's refusal to use their wealth might profitably be finding fault with HIMSELF.

It is only the exceptional man who uses all or even half of his resources.

The brain of the ordinary individual, in which there is boundless wealth ready for use, is but little developed.

Its proud owner gets enough out of it to make a living, but as soon as the wolf retires a few feet from the front door the effort ceases.

Now and then, when he sees what others have accomplished, when ambition for his children stirs him, or when he is moved by the quickening influence of music, he realizes his own possibilities, and his neglect of them.

But the realization lasts only a little while. The next day, when the matter-of-fact business of getting the most possible out of the world with the least possible effort begins again, he goes on in the old way, and the rich mines of his brain remain undeveloped.

Even the greatest of men never accomplish as much as they COULD ACCOMPLISH if they employed all the forces that are given to them.

No man, however successful he has been, is ever able to look back upon his life with absolute satisfaction unless he happens to be a conceited donkey.

Now and then you see some one, perhaps past middle life, suddenly stirred into activity by a great necessity, or a great sorrow, or a great remorse.

He begins to understand his possibilities, and to look for the means of using them.

He becomes IN EARNEST about himself, determined to begin, even though late, to find out just what he can do.

The results are so unexpectedly good, HE is more surprised than any one at the ease with which he can move up in the procession and command the respect and admiration of other men.

It is well, of course, in ordinary times for the money of a country to be employed to its fullest capacity.

If the men who have the talent for making money combined that talent with IMAGINATION, little money would lie idle, and no man would make more than he could wisely use.

Such men as Rockefeller, who has spent millions of dollars to aid the important business of education and of medical research, do a useful work, which society, as a whole, has not yet learned how to do. The wealthy men of the future will do far more for mankind, and this will continue till men are wise enough to DO THEMSELVES, THROUGH THEIR GOVERNMENTS, what now must be done for them by those with the genius for money-getting.

So, before we worry about the accumulation of unused wealth, and feel bitter toward those who allow it to be buried like the talents, in the earth, we had better take the trouble to think of the mental bank accounts that are never drawn upon.

And it is worth remembering that the wealth that is in gold and in the papers and parchments that represent gold is not NEW. But the mines of wealth to be found in every brain will, if worked, supply treasures such as have never before been dreamed of.

The iron and steel that make the locomotive came out of the ground, where the iron had always lain.

But the idea of the locomotive itself, like all ideas that have brought humanity up through the stone age to our very imperfect civilization, came out of a man's mind.

If the men who have done the thinking for the race—and pitifully few of them there are—had been content to draw a bare living from their brains, the rest of us would now be getting our breakfasts with clubs, and sleeping in caves or in the treetops.

HOW TO REDUCE FITZGERALD

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Will you please inform me as to the present whereabouts of one Benjamin F. Gibby, who said he could deliver 50,000 Republican votes to Henry M. Whitney, is he lost, strayed or stolen? When last seen or heard from he was in the vicinity of the Adams House, smoking a Pippin.

"THE ONLY SERIOUS OPPONENT OF THE REPUBLICAN PARTY"

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

I notice in yesterday's paper a statement of Mayor Fitzgerald's that he would accept the nomination of the Independence League, and recommends the merging of the League and the remnants of the Democratic party.

Evidently the Mayor fails to understand the mission of the League, in the first place it is not a hospital for the politically maimed, but offers the other disorganized method of seeking its own candidates; nor does it invite the support of straddling corruptionists.

To unite the two parties! What a back ward step! The organizers of the League have been strenuously engaged for two years in stirring the people from their lethargy, the BOSTON AMERICAN and the earnest, honest, political workers, it has succeeded in eliminating all that is corrupt and impure in politics, and it stands to-day as the only serious opponent of the Republican party.

To unite the two parties would be to undo all that has been struggled for and won by the people. To innoculate the League with the virus of the soul-selling Democratic party would ruin forever the people's chances of self-government.

I know the BOSTON AMERICAN will fight this issue and defeat it.

WALTER W. WRIGHT.

THE HANDWRITING ON THE WALL

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

In an interview in the Traveler, under the headline, "I Will Win," Mayor Fitzgerald claims he will increase his vote 50 per cent over that of the last election.

Now this year, the Independence League, in spite of the stifled press of Boston, polled twenty-five per cent. of the total vote of the city. Where is the Mayor's increase to come from?

He says he never had a machine, yet how many Fitzgerald Clubs can be found in Boston? How many city employes have to give an account of the block in which they live, to show how Smith, Brown and Jones stand? This has been Fitzgerald's policy, proof from the platform it have heard it).

Now as to a man holding office and making enemies: He speaks of the penalties—well, the people rebuked John B. Moran to office as a penalty for faithful service; that's good enough for me considering it is hard to convince a man against his will, but the Mayor's kind of an increase of 50 per cent. won't go. He knows why Donovan and Donovan were defeated; it was the handwriting on the wall—the shadow of the Finance Commission. He asks: "How did it happen that Arthur Dolan of Charlestown was elected?" Well, that is very easily answered. The Independence League had no candidate. If there had been one the three D.'s would have all been defeated—Dunnbeld, Donovan and Dolan—for, mark you, there was no opening left to show the opposition. I hope this answers the Mayor.

KENNETT HARRIS

"How Her Brother Willie Gave a Duck a Hunch That "Little Bright Eyes" Had Been Stringing Him

By Kennett Harris

DUCK threw the end of his cigarette into the gutter and broke a new package, observing as he did so that it wasn't a habit of his, but he needed something to soothe his nerves. "I'm going to rub myself over with carbolic salve to-night before I nestle down on the horsehair," he added.

"Why?" I asked.

"Because I'm sore," replied Duck. "Did you read about that girl who killed her little brother in the paper this morning? I wondered. I didn't, neither, and that's what gets me. I never do. Why, say, that ought to be as common as caraway seeds is in rye bread, and yet it ain't. Did you ever get a hunch? I got one last night. I may be wronging an innocent young woman, but something tells me that little Bright Eyes has been stringing me all the same, like one box of kindergarten beads."

He paused to flutter his poppy silk handkerchief at a girl who was coming out of the delicatessen store across the street, and, failing to attract her attention, sighed heavily.

"I thought I'd give her a treat last evening," he resumed; "so I paddled up to her house and twisted the bell. Willie came to the door. Willie's one of the nicest boys of his size that you ever seen—if you like the size. I don't myself. There's been many a time that Willie came within one of having his little neck twisted till he could bite the buttons off the back of his waist but he don't know nothing about. But that was in the happy, bygone days before Dan Monahan ever wiped his feet on Mrs. Strelski's doormat.

"Well, I says to myself, 'She's a-going to be right down just the same.'

"'I know suthin,' says Willie.

"'You go write it down before you forget it, Buddy,' I says, 'and don't you brag about it, because folks won't believe you.'

"He jumped up and down, grinning. 'I know suthin,' he says. 'I know suthin, I know suthin. I ain't a-going to tell, either. I said I wouldn't and I ain't. I bet you'd like to know.' Then he puts his hand in his panties pocket and pulls out a mess of chocolate cream and paper bag.

Money Coming

"'See that?' he says. 'I can have all the candy I want now. All I got to do when I want any is to ask Estelle or Dan—money either. Don't you wish you knew what I knew? I got a quarter yesterday. I ain't a-going to tell what I know. Want to know where I got the quarter from? I bet you don't know.'

"'I suppose your darling mother give it to you,' I says.

"'Huh!' he says. 'She don't never give me any money. Dan gave me that. I—know—suth—in—I—won't—tell. You bet Estelle don't belt me on the side of the head no more.'

"'She loves her nice little brother too much to do that,' I says. 'He don't never do nothing to get belted for.'

"'That wouldn't cut no ice,' he says. 'You bet she'd better not belt me. I know suthin, I do. I'm going to the dog 'n pony show.'

"'Have you got your tickets?' I ask him.

Willie's Holdup

"'No,' he says, 'but I'll get 'em when I want 'em. I'll get 'em from Dan, or else I'll get 'em from Estelle. I bet you one of 'em gives 'em to me if I ask 'em. They'd better. I'd tell if they didn't, and then they'd be sorry.'

"I says to him, 'Willie, pet, it's a pipe that you've got an elegant graft, but you take my tip and don't you overwork it. Somebody'll get desperate after a while and go before the Grand Jury and give up everything. And the next batch of candy you get from Estelle you take and feed some of it to the dog afore you eat any yourself. I'm telling you this because I think the world of you. And when Estelle comes down,' I says, 'you tell her that I got tired of waiting.'

"Now, Estelle may be faithful and true," said Duck. "I couldn't say that she was anything else. She may have been upstairs there thrillin' with delight at the thought of seeing me once more, as she got into her gay garments and rubbed the powder rag over the shine of her nose. There may not have been anything to that Dan Monahan business, I wouldn't say there was, but deeming myself a feller gets a hunch it's something that he can't get away from. What!"

"Set Down" to Wait

"'You tell sweet sister that I'm here if she's there, Willie,' I says; and he slammed the door shut in my face and I heard his shoes going up the stairs. I wasn't sure whether I was welcome or not from his actions, so I concluded I'd set down on the steps awhile and wait. In a minute I heard him coming down again, and the door opened.

"'She'll be down right away,' he says, and then began sliding down the railing. Then he came up to where I was and showed me where he'd scraped the skin off the end of his nose falling down on his roller skates. Then he says, 'Ain't you mad at Estelle any more?' She don't care for me, or not. She told Dan so, she didn't.'

"'Just a bluff,' I says to myself.

"'You go write it down before you forget it, Buddy,' I says, 'and don't you

All in One Day's News

By C. B. Quincy

WASHINGTON. — Beekman Winthrop, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, had the somewhat moist satisfaction of being the first man to go in the city. He has been taken for a walk by President Roosevelt. Plunging into the woods of Rock Creek Park, the President led Mr. Winthrop ten miles through the trees, occasionally climbing a high one and leaping to the ground on the other side. The rain was falling so fast that Mr. Winthrop had no time to dodge the various drops and many of them fell with a wet splash upon his hat. Finally, after running up a mountain, the President dived under Rock Creek, Mr. Winthrop floundering through the water and falling exhausted on the other side. While not going home in the ambulance Mr. Winthrop expressed his delight at the day's duration, and even the President admitted that it was a very pleasant stroll.
